Cottonwood Heights, UT - Angie?s list, a top website that helps households find high quality local service companies and health care professionals in over 700 different categories, has recently posted an informative article educating readers on different ways pet urine odors can be removed from carpets.

The article starts by informing readers that the most important step is to act promptly, ?Clean up any urine that?s still wet. If the urine dries, it stains the carpet and increases bacteria growth. To best remove the stain, place a layer of several paper towels of the wet area of the carpet.?

The recommended next steps are to neutralize the urine odor, use commercial pet stain removers and as a last resort to hire a carpet cleaning service (which naturally fits into the offerings provided by Angie?s List).

The article provides instructions on how to create homemade urine odor neutralizer with Vinegar and baking soda. It goes on to state that if this homemade remedy does not work, it is recommended to use commercial pet stain removers.

?The market is filled with commercial pet stain removers?Some products work better than others?Read the label on these products to find the one that can best remove pet urine odor from carpet,? states the article.

?The homemade solution didn?t work for me, so from the recommendation of a friend, I bought a professional grade dog and cat pet urine odor remover from Amazon from the company Remove Urine. It worked just as described and the odor is gone,? said Rose, a satisfied customer of S.U.N ? Severe Urine Neutralizer product by Remove Urine, a top Amazon retailer.

Lastly, the article recommends if all else fails, to hire a professional carpet cleaning service. ?These experts have a wide range of machines and solvents at their disposal to clean your new carpet, remove odors and make it look good as new.?

Remove Urine can be found on Amazon.com with their flagship odor removal product, S.U.N ? Severe Urine Neutralizer concentrate for pet urine odor removal as well as other urine odor removal products.
