nKLIK, a business in San Diego, CA, that also services the Los Angeles area, has recently launched a new free consultation service for prospective clients. Before deciding to hire the company, people can now receive a free brand optimization consultation. This is completely free and no obligation, and it includes an extensive market research and competition analysis report. The opportunity to access this report is only available for a limited time.

Roderick Luna from nKLIK says: "Our analysis report is designed to show people what their current online standing is. Additionally, by looking at the rest of the market and our clients' competition in particular, we make recommendations in terms of how they can improve on their standing. This is a very important tool that effectively lifts the veil on exactly what we aim to do for our clients, empowering them to decide whether or not they want to go ahead with the service."

nKLIK is very well-known for its extensive online marketing services across the San Diego and Los Angeles areas. Their goal is to make sure their clients receive high web traffic. They also focus on making sure this traffic actually converts into paying and returning customers. In so doing, they build a lifetime of customer value, improving their overall reputation and turning into a household name.

The services that nKLIK have provided have been very well received by their many clients. "It's the perfect solution for our business," says Mikako H. "I would like to personally thank you for your outstanding product. Your web design services have completely surpassed our expectations."

The company offers a number of specific SEO solutions to clients. They do not provide a one size fits all solution, instead encouraging people to use the specific online marketing techniques that will have the biggest overall impact on their bottom line. The services they offer include search engine optimization, local buzz, social media optimization, pay per click marketing, AdWords remarketing, website design, online reputation management, website audits, and brand optimization. Put together, these services have been designed to help businesses dominate the internet and get ahead of their competition, ensuring their brand becomes more recognized.
