

Translating Law into Practice: Chehardy Sherman Williams Health Law Talk Podcast Series Highlights Healthcare Legal Issues

July 10, 2025

NEW ORLEANS, LA - July 10, 2025 -
Chehardy Sherman Williams, one of the largest full-service law firms in the Greater New Orleans area, continues to drive meaningful conversations in the healthcare legal space with Health Law Talk, its ongoing podcast series. Hosted by attorneys Rory Bellina, Conrad Meyer, and George Mueller, the podcast offers a practical, informed look at the legal, regulatory, and policy issues that healthcare professionals face today.

Produced at the firm?s Health Law Talk studio, the podcast provides a unique platform where attorneys and subject matter experts weigh in on the most pressing legal topics impacting the healthcare industry. Each episode is designed to be accessible, informative, and relevant, to equip healthcare providers, administrators, and stakeholders with a deeper understanding of how the law intersects with medicine and public policy. Whether the focus is national legislation or Louisiana-specific updates, the Health Law Talk podcast is consistently rooted in real-world legal insight backed by the firm?s extensive experience in the healthcare sector.

The podcast covers a wide range of topics. In a recent episode, Bellina and Meyer broke down some of the year?s most significant healthcare fraud and abuse cases, analyzing how those decisions shape compliance standards. Another episode tackled Louisiana?s therapeutic cannabis program, examining the evolution of the state?s cornerstone medical marijuana statutes and what refinements may come in 2025. Other recent discussions have addressed the extension of federal telehealth flexibilities through September 2025, the growing influence of private equity in healthcare acquisitions, and how physician non-compete clauses are being reshaped by Louisiana?s 2024 Senate Bill 185.

Episodes often feature interviews with industry professionals and legislators, providing a well-rounded perspective on legal issues affecting the healthcare ecosystem. Guests have included Joe Aguilar of HMS Valuation Partners, who spoke on the nuances of healthcare valuation; pediatric orthopedist and attorney Dr. Davida Packer, who shared insights on moral injury in healthcare; and State Representative Thomas Pressly, who joined Maria Bowen from the Louisiana State Medical Society to discuss legislative advocacy and medical policy reform.

While the podcast is a public educational service, Chehardy Sherman Williams notes that the content does not constitute legal advice and should not be interpreted as establishing an attorney-client relationship. The views expressed by guests are their own and do not imply firm endorsement.

Since 1989, Chehardy Sherman Williams has offered legal representation to a broad spectrum of healthcare clients, including physicians, group practices, specialty hospitals, ambulatory surgery centers, imaging facilities, laboratories, and pharmacies. The firm?s healthcare law team provides legal guidance on regulatory compliance, fraud and abuse matters, HIPAA issues, employee and payor contracts, Medicare and Medicaid concerns, insurance reimbursement disputes, and more. With deep knowledge of federal and state-level laws, the firm helps clients navigate a rapidly changing and highly regulated industry.

"Health Law Talk was born out of a simple idea: that complex healthcare issues deserve clear, practical conversations,? said Conrad Meyer. ?We?re not just breaking down regulations?we?re opening the door to understanding how the law truly affects the people delivering and receiving care every day."

?Our goal with Health Law Talk is to give healthcare professionals a space where they can stay ahead of the legal curve?without getting lost in the jargon,? said Rory Bellina. ?It?s about making complex policy relatable and offering real context for real-world decisions.?

Episodes of Health Law Talk are available to stream on the firm?s website and major podcast platforms, including Spotify and Apple Podcasts. New episodes are released regularly and reflect the firm?s ongoing commitment to informing and empowering the healthcare community.
