Raleigh Faces 25% Spike in Multi-Car Accidents: Mogy Law NC Highlights Legal Challenges and Safety Measures

July 16, 2025

RALEIGH, NC - July 16, 2025 -
Mogy Law, a respected legal firm in the area, is drawing attention to a 25% increase in multi-vehicle collision cases in Raleigh over the past few years. Looking at the data from 2019 to 2022, Raleigh experienced 63,661 car accidents, resulting in 12,202 injuries and 134 tragic fatalities. This alarming increase highlights a growing concern for road safety in the city.

Eric Mogy, a key representative from Mogy Law, discusses the uptick in accidents involving multiple vehicles. These types of accidents present intricate legal challenges that are becoming more frequent in the area. Eric Mogy stated, "Multi-vehicle collisions are prevalent in Raleigh and represent a complex legal challenge. Our firm has been actively working on cases related to these types of accidents, and it's important for the community to understand the common causes behind them."

The busy traffic and layout of Raleigh's streets are significant factors contributing to the rise in these accidents. Mogy points to common distractions like mobile phone usage, following too closely behind other cars, and abrupt lane changes as major reasons for these incidents. Such factors create hazardous conditions that can quickly lead to multi-vehicle collisions.

After an accident, victims often find themselves in bewildering situations. The chaos that follows a multi-vehicle collision can be overwhelming and complicated. Mogy emphasizes the importance of responding promptly and effectively after an accident occurs. He advises individuals involved in such situations to immediately document the accident scene, seek necessary medical attention, and inform local law enforcement. These steps are crucial as they can significantly influence the outcome of any future legal claims and help ensure that those involved are fairly treated.

Dealing with insurance claims in the aftermath of an accident, especially involving multiple vehicles, often adds another layer of complexity. Insurance companies are known to complicate the claims process, aiming to minimize the compensation payouts, which can leave victims in distress, dealing with financial hardships and mounting medical bills. According to Mogy, "Our practice has seen a range of tactics used by insurance companies to reduce settlement amounts. It's crucial for accident victims to be aware of these tactics and seek legal guidance to navigate their claims effectively."

The Mogy Law Firm car accident lawyer points out that North Carolinas increased minimum auto insurance coverage requirements could influence how multi-vehicle accident cases are handled. These regulatory changes have the potential to affect both the legal strategies employed and the financial outcomes achieved by those involved in such situations.

In their commitment to serving Raleigh residents, Mogy Law educates the community through their informative blog. One notable post, "Legal Steps to Take After a Multi-Vehicle Accident in Raleigh," offers valuable insights and detailed guidance on managing the aftermath of these complex accidents. This resource aims to empower residents with the knowledge they need to handle such unfortunate events effectively.

Mogy highlights the critical role that legal expertise plays in these situations. "Our firm remains dedicated to assisting those affected by these increasingly common accidents. We aim to ensure that our clients receive fair treatment and appropriate compensation," he asserted. By providing knowledgeable representation, Mogy Law strives to support victims in achieving justice and fair resolution.

As the frequency of multi-vehicle collisions continues to rise in Raleigh, it becomes increasingly important for residents to be aware of the potential risks and the necessary precautions they should take. Through education and expert legal guidance, Mogy Law is committed to aiding victims of these complex accidents.
