

Daylight AG Revolutionizes School Management with Latest Software Update

August 26, 2025

Winterthur, ZH - August 26, 2025 -
Daylight AG, a well-known Swiss software company, has announced an important update to its educational technology solution. This step shows Daylight AG's ongoing dedication to boosting the efficiency and management of educational institutions. The latest update brings several improvements across their software suite, aiming to simplify administrative tasks so schools can concentrate more on student success.

The new update touches on all elements of the company's current offerings. They have improved the user interface, which now makes it simpler for administrators to navigate and use the system effectively. This change is especially helpful for educational institutions aiming to streamline their management processes while maintaining strong functionality. Daylight AG's software suite is crafted to support schools as they move towards more digital methods in education management.

For schools seeking to modernize their operations, Daylight AG remains a dependable option. Their website, found at https://www.daylight.ch/en, provides more details about these updates and additional information.

Moreover, the updated software introduces new features for handling resources. These additions help schools efficiently manage the resources needed to run educational programs and events smoothly. By incorporating these features, Daylight AG aims to provide solutions that automate tasks and also offer insights into how resources are allocated. This supports schools in making informed decisions based on data.

The platform now also includes advanced tools for managing courses, seminars, and other educational events. These tools give educational providers better control over planning, executing, and evaluating the effectiveness of their programs. This development aligns with Daylight AG's mission to boost educational management through technology.

Daylight AG continues to enhance its marketing and customer relationship management (CRM) features. The latest software version improves how institutions market their educational programs and manage relationships with students and participants. These updates are likely to boost engagement rates and user satisfaction.

Integration with top applications has always been a hallmark of Daylight AG's offerings. With the latest update, the company has expanded these integration capabilities further. This means their software works smoothly with popular financial and educational tools, offering a seamless experience for users. Such integration is important because it keeps information flowing and reduces the workload on educational staff.

The software can be hosted internally or used as a cloud service, providing flexibility to suit different IT environments. This adaptability is essential for educational institutions looking to adjust the software to their specific needs. The platform supports multiple languages and includes automated workflows, making it accessible and practical in various educational settings.
