PHILADELPHIA, PA - August 11, 2025 -
Philadelphia, PA ? In the fight against human trafficking, few attorneys in Pennsylvania have demonstrated the level of commitment, legal knowledge, and survivor-focused advocacy as Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq., managing attorney of Survivors of Abuse PA. Based in Philadelphia and serving clients across the state, DiLiberto has built a reputation as one of the leading civil attorneys representing survivors of sex trafficking. Her law firm has been recognized for providing trauma-informed legal support and pursuing aggressive civil litigation against traffickers and the institutions that enable them.

Sex trafficking is a devastating crime that targets the vulnerable, including minors, runaways, immigrants, and economically disadvantaged individuals. Victims are often manipulated, coerced, or forced into commercial sexual exploitation by traffickers who profit off their abuse. What many survivors do not know is that they may have the legal right to seek compensation from not only their traffickers, but also from third parties?such as hotels, motels, transportation services, websites, and landlords?who turned a blind eye or knowingly profited from trafficking activity. Under federal laws like the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act (TVPRA), survivors have the right to file civil lawsuits against those who facilitated or failed to prevent the abuse.

Attorney Ashley B. DiLiberto has emerged as a powerful advocate in this space. She has worked with survivors to bring civil claims that shine a light on corporate negligence and institutional complicity. Whether the abuse occurred in a roadside motel, a rideshare vehicle, or behind closed doors in residential apartments, DiLiberto's firm has the resources and experience to investigate trafficking networks and hold all responsible parties accountable.

What sets DiLiberto apart is her trauma-informed approach to the legal process. Her team understands the deep psychological impact that trafficking leaves on survivors and offers legal services grounded in empathy, trust, and confidentiality. Every case is handled with the utmost discretion, and clients are never pressured to share more than they are ready to. Survivors of Abuse PA also collaborates with therapists, victim advocates, and social workers to ensure clients receive holistic support throughout the legal journey.

Ashley B. DiLiberto has represented clients in high-profile sexual abuse cases and is no stranger to challenging litigation. She played a pivotal role in the historic Boy Scouts of America sexual abuse settlement and has been involved in multidistrict litigation representing survivors of institutional abuse. Her expertise in complex legal procedures, combined with her dedication to client welfare, makes her uniquely equipped to handle the intricate nature of sex trafficking lawsuits, which often involve multiple defendants and sensitive timelines.

In addition to her courtroom advocacy, DiLiberto is a public voice for reform. She supports legislative efforts to extend statutes of limitations and create "lookback windows" for survivors who were previously barred from filing claims. Her firm offers free and confidential consultations to anyone who believes they may have been sex trafficked and works on a contingency fee basis?meaning clients never pay out of pocket unless compensation is recovered.

Survivors of Abuse PA is headquartered at 123 S. 22nd Street in Philadelphia and proudly represents survivors throughout the entire state, including Pittsburgh, Allentown, Lancaster, Harrisburg, Erie, and Scranton. By combining legal strength with compassionate care, Ashley B. DiLiberto continues to set the standard for sex trafficking litigation in Pennsylvania.
