PHILADELPHIA, PA - August 12, 2025 -
Harrisburg, PA - Survivors of sexual abuse in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, now have a powerful legal ally in Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq., a recognized advocate for trauma-informed representation and compassionate, results-driven legal advocacy. As the managing attorney at Survivors of Abuse PA, DiLiberto has emerged as one of the most trusted voices for victims seeking justice across the Commonwealth. While based in Philadelphia, her reach and commitment span statewide, including the Harrisburg region, where survivors continue to seek trusted counsel to navigate both civil justice and the complex emotional realities of abuse recovery.

Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq. has built her reputation on the foundation of empathy, discretion, and legal excellence. Her experience handling high-profile sexual abuse litigation?including cases involving clergy abuse, boarding schools, psychiatric abuse, daycare molestation, and sex trafficking?has made her a sought-after attorney among survivors and advocacy networks. Harrisburg, as the state capital and home to organizations such as the Pennsylvania Coalition to Advance Respect (PCAR), has seen increasing calls for accountability in institutions where abuse has historically gone unchecked. DiLiberto's practice complements these advocacy efforts with legal strategies that prioritize the survivor?s voice, agency, and long-term recovery.

Unlike general personal injury firms, Ashley B. DiLiberto focuses exclusively on sexual abuse cases, providing survivors with targeted expertise in both state and federal litigation. Her trauma-informed approach means survivors are never pressured or retraumatized during legal proceedings. Instead, she works closely with mental health professionals, crisis centers, and support organizations?including regional partners in Dauphin County?to offer a wraparound model of care that balances justice with healing. Her approach is especially important in Harrisburg, where survivors may be referred through local organizations like YWCA

Greater Harrisburg, PCAR, and the Dauphin County Victim/Witness Assistance Program.

What sets DiLiberto apart is not just her legal expertise but her commitment to education and empowerment. Through the Survivors of Abuse PA platform, she regularly publishes resources for survivors, hosts podcasts to break the silence surrounding abuse, and provides clear, accessible information on Pennsylvania?s evolving sexual abuse laws. Her dedication to making the legal process approachable has earned her recognition as one of the most compassionate and responsive attorneys for survivors in the state.

Pennsylvania?s laws around sexual abuse have undergone significant reform in recent years, expanding the statute of limitations for child victims and improving access to civil justice. Yet, for many in Harrisburg, the path forward remains uncertain without knowledgeable legal guidance. DiLiberto's work bridges this gap. She assists clients in understanding their rights, filing civil lawsuits against abusers and negligent institutions, and pursuing compensation for the profound physical and psychological harm caused by sexual violence. Her representation is offered on a contingency basis, ensuring that survivors never pay upfront and only pay if compensation is successfully recovered.

Whether the abuse occurred in a school, church, medical setting, youth organization, or within a trusted relationship, DiLiberto ensures every case is approached with care and respect. She understands the courage it takes to come forward and works tirelessly to ensure that courage is met with strong, effective representation. Harrisburg sexual abuse survivors no longer have to face the legal system alone?Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq. stands ready to guide them with clarity and compassion.
