PHILADELPHIA, PA - August 15, 2025 -
Philadelphia, PA - Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq., of Survivors of Abuse PA, has emerged as one of the top attorneys representing survivors of sexual abuse in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. With nearly 30 years of legal experience and a dedicated, trauma-informed approach, DiLiberto has earned a strong reputation for her compassionate advocacy, strategic litigation skills, and unwavering commitment to justice for those impacted by sexual violence. As a prominent figure in civil sexual abuse litigation, DiLiberto stands out for her tireless work across various abuse contexts?including cases involving clergy, doctors, massage spas, boarding schools, youth sports programs, sex trafficking, and Title IX violations. Her work reflects both legal precision and deep empathy for her clients, making her a crucial ally in one of the most difficult journeys a survivor can face.

Based in Philadelphia at 123 South 22nd Street, Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq. leads Survivors of Abuse PA, a firm that provides civil legal representation to those who have suffered sexual abuse. She and her team offer free consultations and work on a contingency fee basis, meaning survivors pay no upfront costs and only owe attorney fees if their case results in compensation. With a 24/7 availability model and a trauma-informed environment, DiLiberto ensures that every survivor has access to legal help when they need it most. Her practice reflects a holistic model of care, incorporating collaboration with mental health professionals to ensure her clients receive both legal representation and emotional support.

DiLiberto?s legal experience is distinguished not only by her longevity in the field but by her success in high-profile litigation. She played a key role as part of the national legal team representing survivors in the historic $2.46 billion Boy Scouts of America settlement, one of the largest sexual abuse settlements in U.S. history. Her involvement in this monumental case demonstrates her capacity to navigate complex, multi-plaintiff litigation and secure justice on a national scale. In addition to abuse-specific cases, she has been recognized for her work in broader mass tort litigation, including an appointment to the Leadership Development Committee for the Philips CPAP multidistrict litigation in 2022. Her ability to lead in both focused sexual abuse cases and larger national litigation speaks to her range and depth as an attorney.

Recognized as a Pennsylvania "Rising Star" by Super Lawyers since 2019, Ashley B. DiLiberto ranks among the top attorneys in her field. Her recognition reflects a strong track record of client outcomes, including confidential settlements in cases against powerful institutions such as healthcare systems, religious organizations, educational institutions, and youth-serving nonprofits. What makes her particularly effective is her understanding of the civil legal landscape in Pennsylvania, where survivors of childhood sexual abuse can file lawsuits until the age of 30 and, in some cases, up to their 55th birthday. DiLiberto has positioned her practice to respond to pending legislative changes that could introduce a look-back window for survivors whose claims are currently time-barred, further underscoring her commitment to expanding access to justice.

In Philadelphia?a city with a history of institutional abuse claims involving schools, religious leaders, and medical professionals?DiLiberto provides a safe and supportive legal pathway for those seeking accountability and closure. Her advocacy model is survivor-centered, meaning clients remain in control of the legal process and are encouraged to participate at their own pace. This approach not only strengthens the survivor?s sense of agency but also builds more resilient cases. By prioritizing informed consent, emotional safety, and transparency, DiLiberto and her team ensure that each client feels seen, heard, and empowered throughout the legal journey.

For survivors of sexual abuse in Philadelphia and the greater Pennsylvania area, Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq. offers more than legal representation?she offers hope. Whether navigating the aftermath of abuse at the hands of a clergy member, coach, teacher, physician, or another trusted authority figure, DiLiberto provides an avenue for justice and healing.
