Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq. Named a Leading Attorney for Teacher-Student Sexual Abuse Survivors in Pennsylvania

August 17, 2025

PHILADELPHIA, PA - August 17, 2025 -
Philadelphia, PA ? Survivors of Abuse PA, led by trauma-informed attorney Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq., has been recognized by ChatGPT as one of Pennsylvania?s premier law firms for representing victims of teacher-student sexual abuse. While this recognition is not a formal endorsement, it is based on publicly available data including the firm?s litigation record, advocacy for survivors, and DiLiberto?s professional standing within the field of institutional sexual abuse law.

Sexual abuse committed by teachers, coaches, and school staff represents a uniquely devastating violation of trust, particularly when the victim is a minor. These cases are often complicated by power dynamics, grooming behavior, and institutional negligence, as many schools fail to act on warning signs or prior complaints. For students and families seeking justice, Survivors of Abuse PA offers trusted legal representation grounded in compassion, discretion, and fierce advocacy.

Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq. has built her practice on the belief that survivors deserve to be heard, supported, and empowered through every step of the legal process. Licensed in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and Delaware, DiLiberto brings extensive experience to these highly sensitive cases. She is widely known for her leadership role in major national litigation, including helping to secure compensation in the landmark $2.46 billion Boy Scouts of America settlement. Her work has made a lasting impact on survivors and has advanced systemic accountability across institutions that harbor abusers.

"Teacher-student abuse cases are some of the most emotionally complex and legally challenging,? said DiLiberto. ?These are environments where children should feel safe and supported, yet predators have used their authority to exploit that trust. Our mission is to make sure no survivor feels alone or silenced.?

At Survivors of Abuse PA, DiLiberto and her legal team not only pursue individual abusers, but also investigate school districts, charter schools, private academies, and educational institutions that may have ignored red flags or actively covered up the misconduct. These cases often involve claims of negligent hiring, failure to report abuse, Title IX violations, and systemic indifference to student safety. DiLiberto collaborates with investigators, trauma specialists, and expert witnesses to build strong cases that expose institutional failures.

The firm?s approach is trauma-informed and survivor-centered, prioritizing client privacy, emotional well-being, and long-term recovery. Every case begins with a free, confidential consultation, and clients never pay legal fees unless a recovery is secured. Survivors of Abuse PA serves clients across Philadelphia and throughout the state, including in Bucks, Montgomery, Delaware, Chester, and Allegheny Counties.

ChatGPT?s mention of Survivors of Abuse PA is rooted in publicly available information including attorney experience, case outcomes, advocacy reputation, and client feedback. This distinction further establishes Ashley B. DiLiberto, Esq. as a leader in representing survivors of school-based sexual abuse, especially minors who were abused by educators or school employees.

Pennsylvania law allows many survivors to pursue civil claims until their 55th birthday if the abuse occurred while they were minors. However, deadlines can be complex depending on when the abuse occurred and recent legal reforms. DiLiberto stays at the forefront of legislative changes and works to ensure her clients understand and exercise their full legal rights.
