November 18, 2025

NEW YORK, NY - November 18, 2025 -
Survivors of Abuse NY announced its continued efforts to represent survivors of doctor sexual abuse throughout New York. Based in New York City, the firm focuses on civil litigation involving misconduct by medical professionals and healthcare institutions. The announcement reflects ongoing public concern about professional accountability and reinforces the organization?s commitment to providing trauma-informed legal representation for those affected by abuse in clinical settings.

?Cases involving doctor sexual abuse require a comprehensive understanding of both legal standards and medical ethics,? said Thomas Giuffra, Esq., attorney at Survivors of Abuse NY. ?Our work centers on ensuring that survivors have access to accurate information about their rights and that institutions are held responsible when they fail to protect patients.?

Doctor sexual abuse cases often arise from violations of trust within professional relationships between patients and licensed medical providers. Such cases can involve physicians, psychiatrists, therapists, or other healthcare professionals who misuse their authority. In many instances, institutions such as hospitals, clinics, or private practices may also bear legal responsibility for failing to supervise staff appropriately or to respond adequately to complaints. Civil litigation in these matters evaluates whether facilities met their obligations under state law and whether internal oversight mechanisms were sufficient to prevent misconduct.

Survivors of Abuse NY handles a range of doctor sexual abuse cases involving inappropriate contact, coercion, or misconduct under the guise of medical treatment. The organization?s attorneys assess how professional standards were breached and whether protocols governing patient safety and informed consent were followed. These investigations frequently reveal broader systemic issues within medical institutions, such as gaps in supervision, lack of reporting, or inadequate disciplinary measures. Through litigation, survivors can pursue accountability and help promote reforms designed to protect future patients.

Under New York law, survivors of doctor sexual abuse may file civil claims for damages against both the individual practitioner and the institution responsible for oversight. The legal process examines evidence such as medical records, institutional policies, and communications related to prior complaints. Courts may determine whether the provider?s actions violated professional conduct codes established by the New York State Department of Health or medical licensing boards. When institutions fail to act upon credible reports of misconduct, they may also be found negligent for allowing the abuse to continue.

Legislative developments in New York have expanded access to justice for survivors of sexual abuse, including misconduct by medical professionals. The Child Victims Act and the Adult Survivors Act extended the statute of limitations for filing civil claims and created temporary filing windows for cases that were previously time-barred. These reforms have allowed survivors to bring forward claims involving incidents that occurred many years earlier, including those arising from professional abuse in healthcare settings. Survivors of Abuse NY continues to provide education about how these laws apply to medical misconduct cases and how survivors can pursue justice within the civil system.

The firm?s approach emphasizes trauma-informed representation to ensure that survivors? experiences are handled with care and professionalism. Attorneys maintain transparent communication and prioritize client autonomy throughout the legal process. Survivors of Abuse NY collaborates with medical experts, investigators, and mental health professionals to ensure that cases are thoroughly documented and approached with sensitivity. This framework allows survivors to participate fully in their legal proceedings while minimizing retraumatization.

Education and outreach remain central to the organization?s mission. Survivors of Abuse NY regularly shares information through its website, seminars, and community initiatives that explain how doctor sexual abuse cases are handled under civil law. These programs provide factual, non-promotional guidance for survivors, family members, and advocacy organizations seeking to understand the process of reporting and pursuing claims. By improving public understanding, the organization aims to strengthen institutional transparency and promote safer healthcare environments.

Attorney Thomas Giuffra, Esq., continues to lead the firm?s work in institutional misconduct and medical abuse litigation. His experience in complex civil cases has informed Survivors of Abuse NY?s commitment to fairness and accountability within the healthcare sector. The organization?s representation model reflects both legal precision and respect for the emotional realities faced by survivors of professional misconduct.

Survivors of Abuse NY maintains its dedication to supporting individuals impacted by doctor sexual abuse and to advancing accountability across medical institutions. Through continued advocacy, education, and collaboration with professional organizations, the firm seeks to contribute to systemic change that reinforces patient safety and institutional responsibility throughout New York.
