TUCSON, AZ - August 13, 2025 -
Entrepreneurship Essentials has launched a new plan to bring an entrepreneurial mindset to large companies through its Corporate Innovation program. This initiative, led by Dr. Greg Watson, a retired professor and experienced entrepreneur, aims to weave the innovative spirit of entrepreneurs into the everyday operations of big businesses. The goal is to breathe new life into corporate environments, encouraging fresh ideas and helping employees take charge of innovation within their organizations.

The Corporate Innovation program helps employees see beyond traditional thinking. It includes leadership workshops and special training sessions that promote creative problem-solving by nurturing an entrepreneurial mindset. Dr. Watson states, "Our program is tailored to help businesses leverage the innovative potential of their teams. By embedding entrepreneurial principles within corporate structures, we aim to not only spur innovation but also strengthen the overall competitive position of the company."

The program combines theory with practical exercises to give participants the tools they need to boost their innovation skills. It acknowledges the valuable contributions of diverse voices, such as women entrepreneurs, and aims to include their perspectives in corporate settings. By fostering teamwork, the program supports diversity and uses successful innovation strategies.

Adopting a corporate entrepreneurship approach has many upsides, such as boosting innovation, enhancing competitiveness, increasing employee engagement, and improving adaptability to market changes. By encouraging a company culture that supports intrapreneurship, businesses can stay ahead in fast-changing industries, explore new growth opportunities, and develop new business models.
