Draper Chiropractic Marketing, an online marketing company based in Los Angeles, that focuses specifically on the chiropractic industry, has designed a brand new suite of SEO services specific to their niche. Chiropractic SEO is a highly specialized form of online marketing that aims to attract new clients to a clinic through organic search results.

The suite of services offered by the company were designed and tested through years of working with chiropractors.

Joseph Bonham, SEO director of Draper Chiropractic Marketing, says: "People search for everything online now and the reality is that they rarely ever go past the first page of the search results. If you're not on the first page of search engines or you're not moving in toward that goal, then your business is in trouble. We've built and tested our SEO methods over years, so when we apply them to your practice, we're fully confident that we'll achieve the desired results."

Draper Chiropractic Marketing focuses on increasing relevant traffic and lead volume to chiropractic websites. They do this with knowledge and experience developed over years in the business.

The company relies on a systematic approach for their clients and this approach has been proven to work time and again. They now offer full campaigns that include all elements such as keyword research, optimization, directory listings, social media campaigns, blogs, press releases, link building, monitoring, and reporting. Although they use a proven systematic approach, Draper Chiropractic Marketing also understand that campaigns have to be adaptable, as no two businesses are exactly the same.

For this reason, they offer personalized plans for each of their clients.

"Chiropractors need to be online, but they need much more than that to be successful," says Bonham. "They need a marketing strategy and, more importantly, execution. There's simply no way a chiropractor can effectively do their job and market their business at the same time. We allow them to focus on helping their patients, while we help their marketing."

Chiropractic clinics are encouraged to contact the marketing company through their website at draperchiropracticmarketing.com.
