Scottsdale, Arizona-based Smart Kitchen is proud to announce the launch of their new online culinary classes. The classes have been designed to teach people how to cook like a professional chef, but with no previous experience necessary. As the classes are online, the company is also offering new students a free trial, so that they can get to know what the program is all about.

The company's new online culinary classes are already proving to be very popular.

Perry Herst, one of the founders of Smart Kitchen, says: "We've harnessed the know-how of professional chefs and built an online curriculum that shows you how to cook like a pro. Our online culinary classes offer students the ability to learn on their own time while within their own kitchens. Cooking has always fit very naturally into an exercise that is taught visually or learn-through-practice and Smart Kitchen provides just that in a convenient package."

Aspiring cooks can choose from a range of different lessons, as the online school caters to people of varying degrees of experience. As such, the curriculum is broken down for beginner, intermediate and advanced cooking enthusiasts. Besides offering direct instructions on how to cook a certain dish, perform a certain task or learn a specific skill, Smart Kitchen also provides significant information on culinary terms and conveniently cross references those throughout their massive database for members who want to become true kitchen experts.

"It's not necessarily easy to learn how to cook like a professional chef, but Smart Kitchen makes it easier than it's ever been," Hearst says, "and you don't even have to go to culinary school. You can learn just as well and for much, much less of an investment, with us during your free time."

Those who are interested in the free trial or want to sign up and start improving their cooking expertise can do so through the company's website on smartkitchen.com. An easy enrollment form is included on the site and those who register can start learning straight away. A large number of free resources are also provided on the website for anyone to enjoy.
