Autism Response Team Opens New ABA Therapy Center

August 25, 2025 -

Autism Response Team (ART), a leading provider of Applied Behavior Analysis (ABA) therapy and family-centered autism services across Texas, has officially opened a new clinic in Celina at 245 S Preston Rd, Suite 110. This expansion marks an important milestone in ART?s continued commitment to serving children and families affected by autism spectrum disorder (ASD) in fast-growing North Texas communities. The new center is now accepting new families.

Founded by autism advocates and clinical professionals Joey Resweber and Lisa Mousselli, the Autism Response Team specializes in delivering personalized, evidence-based ABA therapy designed to build functional communication, improve social behaviors, and promote independence. With its newest clinic in Celina, ART brings its unique, family-inclusive model of care closer to Collin County residents?reducing barriers to early intervention and comprehensive autism support in rural and suburban areas.

?Our goal has always been to meet families where they are, both geographically and emotionally,? said Lisa Mousselli, co-founder of ART. ?Opening in Celina allows us to reach more families in underserved areas who need immediate, individualized care for their children. We?re not just a clinic, we?re a full support system.?

The Celina center offers the full continuum of ART?s services, including in-clinic ABA therapy, in-home and in-school support, community-based interventions, and telehealth sessions. Each client begins with a detailed behavioral assessment to create an individualized therapy plan aligned with their developmental goals. These plans are continually adjusted through data collection and progress monitoring to ensure the best possible outcomes over time. In addition to direct therapy, ART provides robust parent education programs and sibling support groups, fostering inclusive progress within the family unit and extending therapeutic impact into everyday life.

A distinguishing feature of ART is its emphasis on whole-family care. From parent coaching to sibling playgroups, the organization?s approach empowers caregivers with tools to reinforce therapeutic goals at home. ?Parents aren?t just observers in our program, they?re active participants,? said Mousselli. ?That?s what leads to meaningful and lasting progress.?

Celina's rapid population growth, particularly among young families, made it a natural choice for ART?s next location. The new center expands access to services in the region alongside existing locations in McKinney, Prosper, and Tyler. As with all ART locations, the Celina clinic is staffed with board-certified behavior analysts (BCBAs), registered behavior technicians (RBTs), and care coordinators who undergo rigorous training and ongoing professional development. Beyond therapy, the team also partners with local schools, physicians, and community organizations to ensure holistic support for clients throughout their journey and promote successful long-term outcomes.

?Our team is highly trained and deeply passionate about making a difference,? said Joey Resweber. ?Every child is unique, so every therapy plan is, too. We?re proud to bring that level of care to Celina.?

ART?s expansion also reflects the growing demand for high-quality autism services across Texas. With over 200 professionals on staff, the organization continues to invest in clinical innovation, staff development, and inclusive community partnerships. Insurance plans vary by location and service type, and families are encouraged to contact the clinic directly to learn more about coverage and availability.

The new Celina center is open Monday through Friday, with flexible scheduling to accommodate families? needs. ART invites prospective families to schedule an intake call, tour the facility, or attend one of its upcoming community open house events this fall.
