Attorney Team at Horst Shewmaker LLC Leads Efforts for Pedestrian Accident Safety and Justice

September 03, 2025

AUGUSTA, GA - September 03, 2025 -
Horst Shewmaker, LLC, a personal injury law firm in Georgia, has observed a troubling trend: pedestrian wrongful deaths have surged by 50% recently. This sharp rise highlights an urgent need for increased awareness and preventive measures among Georgia residents and officials. Specializing in cases like crosswalk hit-and-run incidents, Horst Shewmaker plays an active role in advocating for pedestrian safety, aiming to address factors that contribute to these tragedies.

Statistics show that vehicles with hoods taller than 40 inches are 45% more likely to cause pedestrian fatalities. In the first half of 2024, Georgia already recorded 334 pedestrian deaths. The firm stresses the importance of quick and effective measures to tackle this escalating issue. Their team has in-depth knowledge of analyzing vehicle sight-lines and traffic signal data, which is crucial for both legal cases and prevention efforts.

In Augusta, the legal community, driven by Horst Shewmaker, is focused on highlighting the dangers in crosswalks and other vulnerable spots. For detailed legal information, their blog provides valuable insights on pedestrian safety and personal injury law. "Pedestrian safety is not just about individual responsibility. We need a community effort to enhance infrastructure and enforce traffic laws," says Michael Horst, an attorney at the firm. He notes that as Horst Shewmaker pedestrian accident lawyers in Augusta, they can offer comprehensive assistance to victims and their families.

With these alarming numbers, Horst Shewmaker also aims to educate the public about their legal rights for justice and compensation. In cases of wrongful death, preserving evidence is key to strengthening claims. Georgia law allows a two-year period to file these cases, so starting legal action promptly is essential.

Beyond just providing legal representation, Horst Shewmaker offers crucial resources to help people understand pedestrian accident cases. This includes advice on necessary actions after an accident, such as contacting the police, gathering witness statements, and getting medical help quickly. Building strong legal cases relies heavily on these immediate actions, and Horst Shewmaker provides this guidance to their clients. More detailed information about their practice areas can be found on their website's page dedicated to auto accidents.

The firm also advocates for changes that could boost pedestrian safety across Georgia. Improvements like enhanced street lighting, better crosswalk signs, and stricter enforcement of traffic laws could drastically cut pedestrian accidents. These should be a priority for local governments, backed by community efforts, to reduce the number of such unfortunate incidents.

Located conveniently in Augusta GA, Horst Shewmaker assists families in handling the aftermath of pedestrian accidents, making sure they know their rights and options. They provide legal support on issues such as compensation for medical expenses, income loss, pain and suffering, and wrongful death claims when tragedy strikes.

Horst Shewmaker's solid reputation across Georgia comes from their dedication to justice and their extensive knowledge in personal injury law. Their approach goes beyond courtroom battles; they also push for legislative changes to create safer environments for all. For comprehensive insights into their activities and cases, their news section frequently updates developments in pedestrian safety law. Understanding the urgent need for discussion and action, the firm focuses on individual justice and broader road safety advocacy.

With Georgia's pedestrian safety situation getting more serious, Horst Shewmaker is leading efforts for safer streets and communities. They are working hard to decrease pedestrian fatalities through a combination of legal expertise and community involvement, striving to bring both awareness and systemic change to the forefront.
