

Tracking Mental Health Gains in Addiction Recovery: All In Solutions Detox Shares Insights About Rehab Success Rate

September 03, 2025

SIMI VALLEY, CA - September 03, 2025 -

All In Solutions Detox, based in California, has recently commented on how tracking mental health for patients in rehab programs have seen improved outcomes. Improving mental health is becoming a vital part of addiction recovery programs. All In Solutions Detox is offering insights into how mental health progress is tracked during rehab and how it connects with overall rehab success. Though substance use and mental health are closely linked, they often aren't monitored together during detox. However, data from All In Solutions Detox show that structured programs can lead to quick improvements in conditions like depression and anxiety.

The company shares some important statistics from its programs. Clients who only completed the All In Solutions Detox, without further aftercare at All In Solutions California, saw a drop in their average Generalized Anxiety Disorder (GAD-7) scores from 15.44 to 11.32. Their average Patient Health Questionnaire (PHQ-9) scores for depression also went down from 16.41 to 12.89. Clients who finished the whole program, including the All In Solutions Detox and follow-up care at All In Solutions California, showed even bigger improvements. Their GAD-7 scores reduced from 15.44 to 4.28, a 72% decrease, and PHQ-9 scores fell from 16.41 to 4.28, marking a 73% decrease.

These reductions in anxiety and depression scores suggest potential for future recovery success, even for those who might struggle with maintaining complete sobriety. Detox treatment often acts as the first positive therapeutic experience for many individuals, and these initial mental health improvements can lay the foundation for more benefits in recovery.

"Clinicians in the substance use disorder treatment field know the challenges of tracking long-term outcomes," said a representative from All In Solutions Detox. "Determining what a successful outcome in addiction treatment means involves several factors, including the changes in anxiety and depression scores from the beginning to the end of treatment. While reaching long-term sobriety is our target, it's also vital to look at mental health progress and quality of life improvements. In the conversation about national rehab success rates, using key indicators like PHQ-9 and GAD-7 scores offers a fuller picture of treatment results."

These score reductions are important because they provide a glimpse into the possibility of better mental health and quality of life for those in recovery. These numbers tell the story of a person's path to wellness and how these changes can transform their life. Tracking these indicators gives a deeper view of what rehab success can mean beyond just sobriety.

As the focus shifts to full-spectrum care, emphasizing mental health progress in drug and alcohol treatment programs adds new dimensions to how success is defined. A strong recovery experience means more than just quitting drugs or alcohol; it includes improving mental health, equipping individuals with the tools to address underlying psychological issues, and supporting their overall growth.

Highlighting these themes, All In Solutions Detox urges more addiction treatment providers to use metrics that consider both drug use reduction and mental health and well-being improvements. Their insights suggest a shift in the rehab sector, stressing the importance of tracking psychological health gains alongside traditional measures.

A key point from All In Solutions Detox is that mental health evaluations like the GAD-7 and PHQ-9 do more than just measure current conditions; they show the potential for ongoing recovery. These scores help build a deeper understanding of the complex nature of addiction recovery.

Through a focus on tracking mental health during substance treatment, All In Solutions Detox contributes to a wider conversation in the field. As more facilities recognize the value of measuring mental well-being throughout the recovery process, it could lead to new standards and methods defining rehab success in a more holistic way.
