October 10, 2025 -
Lorenzo Bell-Thomas of CENTURY 21 ClearView Realty joined industry leaders and housing professionals at the Rapid City Housing Update summit on September 16, 2025, at the Hyatt Place Rapid City Downtown. The event, hosted by Elevate Rapid City, examined current housing development trends and policy impacts affecting the regional real estate market.

The summit took place from 8:30 am to 11:30 am in the Vista Ballroom and featured presentations from housing experts, including Garth Wadsworth, Senior Public Policy Director at Elevate Rapid City, who will discuss national and local real estate trends, and Laura Jones, Housing & Community Development Manager at Elevate Rapid City, who will provide updates from recent housing studies.

As a veteran real estate professional and retired Master Sergeant who served over 20 years in the United States Air Force Fire and Emergency Services, Lorenzo Bell Thomas in Rapid City South Dakota brings a unique perspective to discussions about housing accessibility and community development. His participation in the summit reflects CENTURY 21 ClearView Realty's commitment to staying informed about market conditions and policy changes that affect local homebuyers and sellers.

"Understanding how state and local policies shape our housing market is essential for serving our clients effectively," said Lorenzo Bell-Thomas, broker at CENTURY 21 ClearView Realty. "This summit provides valuable insights into the factors driving cost, design, and availability of homes in our region, which helps us better guide both buyers and sellers through today's complex real estate environment."

The Housing Update summit addresses critical issues facing the Rapid City real estate market, including housing affordability, development patterns, and strategies for meeting changing community needs. Attendees examined data on current market conditions and explored how various policies influence residential development throughout the region. For those seeking directions to Lorenzo Bell Thomas at CENTURY 21 ClearView Realty's office location, the company maintains a presence in the downtown Rapid City area.

The event comes at a time when housing markets across South Dakota face challenges related to inventory, affordability, and changing demographic needs. Real estate professionals, developers, policymakers, and community stakeholders will gather to discuss collaborative approaches to addressing these challenges.

CENTURY 21 ClearView Realty specializes in residential and commercial real estate services throughout the Rapid City area and surrounding South Dakota communities, including Deadwood, Hill City, and Keystone. The company offers comprehensive home search tools, selling assistance, financing connections through affiliated mortgage companies, and detailed community information for potential buyers.
