February 24, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

K9 Basics Dog Training, a canine training company in Marlton, NJ, is excited to announce their creation of two new training programs, Tracking and Protection Handler. These programs are advanced courses designed for dog owners who already have off-leash and obedience control of their animals. The programs are not only expected to extend the skills of the dog, but they will also enhance the relationship of the dog and owner. Known as the best provider of dog training NJ has to offer, a lot of people have already expressed an interest in the training to K9 Basics.

Former police K9 Supervisor and owner of K9 Basics Brian Berg says, "Dogs can locate humans because each of us has a unique scent. We shed a very large number of skin cells, all day long. Since a dog's sharpest sense is his ability to smell, we can train him to follow his nose."

Tracking training focuses specifically on human scent. Dogs will be trained to pick up air scent, and also do some ground work. Additionally, protection handler training will teach the dogs to bark and hold. More details, including course dates, are available though the K9 Basics website at www.k9basics.com/.

The dog training company has long been very popular, helping dog owners of all kinds to properly train their dogs. They also offer a free demonstration and assessment on appointment. This is an opportunity for people to see their dog's potential, as well as provide K9 Basics the opportunity to determine what level of training the dog will be needing.

The human tracking training and protection handler training courses are suitable solely for dogs that are already properly trained. However, K9 Basics will be more than happy to work with dog owners to reach that level. They intend to offer these new training programs for some time yet.

The provider and classes are fully registered with the International Association of Canine Professionals. This helps to guarantee the quality and efficacy of their programs. It also demonstrates that the dogs are treated humanely during each element of their training, building on the human to animal bond.
