September 29, 2025

VALENCIA, CA - September 29, 2025 -
Promeza MG announces increased demand for speaking engagements featuring author and registered nurse Raul Meza, whose book "Injection of Faith" has resonated with healthcare professionals and faith communities across the United States and Latin America. The book, which documents real-life stories from 32 years of critical care nursing experience, has led to invitations for presentations at nursing conferences, churches, and international venues in Mexico and Argentina.

"The response to these real-life accounts has been overwhelming, particularly from nursing professionals who recognize the authentic experiences shared in the book," said Raul Meza. "Healthcare workers are finding validation for their own observations of unexplainable recoveries and spiritual encounters in critical care settings."

"Injection of Faith" presents documented accounts from the intensive care unit, including patient reports of Near Death Experience Stories that have captivated readers seeking inspiration and understanding of these profound medical phenomena. The book draws from Meza's extensive career as a critical care nurse, offering both healthcare professionals and general readers insights into miraculous recoveries and transformative patient experiences.

The speaking engagements have expanded beyond traditional healthcare venues to include churches and faith-based organizations interested in exploring the spiritual dimensions of near-death experiences. These presentations combine medical expertise with personal narratives, offering audiences a unique perspective on life, death, and recovery from someone who has witnessed these events firsthand.

The expansion of speaking opportunities reflects growing interest in the intersection of healthcare and spirituality, particularly regarding NDE's and their impact on patients, families, and medical staff. Meza now regularly addresses audiences in both English and Spanish, with the Spanish edition "Inyeccion de Fe" enabling broader reach throughout Latin American communities.

Meza's presentations draw from specific cases documented in the book, providing attendees with detailed accounts of patients who reported visiting the afterlife before returning with transformative stories. These accounts have proven particularly meaningful for individuals dealing with health crises or supporting loved ones through medical challenges.

The international speaking tours in Mexico and Argentina have demonstrated strong interest in these topics across cultural boundaries. The availability of the book in both English and Spanish has facilitated these cross-cultural exchanges, allowing Meza to share these powerful stories with diverse audiences.

Nursing conferences have particularly embraced Meza's presentations as continuing education opportunities that address both the clinical and emotional aspects of critical care nursing. The stories provide valuable insights for healthcare professionals dealing with end-of-life care and supporting families through difficult medical situations.
