

Disaster Plus Highlights Critical Importance of Professional Mold Removal

September 17, 2025

MT PLEASANT, SC - September 17, 2025 -
Disaster Plus, a Mount Pleasant-based restoration company with over 37 years of experience, emphasizes the importance of professional mold remediation services as indoor moisture concerns continue to affect properties. The company recently received a five-star review from a customer whose home required mold removal following roof leak damage, underscoring the value of certified remediation services.

The recent customer testimonial from Anna Stonefield detailed how Disaster Plus responded quickly to address mold growth in her home after discovering water damage from a roof leak. Stonefield praised the company for their transparent pricing and professional approach, noting that the team adjusted their estimate downward when they determined the damage was less extensive than initially assessed.

Mold growth remains a persistent challenge for property owners throughout South Carolina, particularly during periods of high humidity and following water damage incidents. Disaster Plus utilizes advanced containment methods and air filtration systems to safely remove mold while preventing the spread of spores to unaffected areas of the property.

"Mold remediation requires more than just surface cleaning," said Keating Norris, a representative for Disaster Plus. "Our team follows strict IICRC S520 guidelines and employs negative air machines and air scrubbers to ensure complete containment during the removal process. Many property owners don't realize that improper mold removal can actually spread spores throughout the building, creating a larger problem than the original contamination."

Disaster Plus's mold removal service is a comprehensive approach, including both pre-remediation and post-remediation testing conducted by Certified Industrial Hygienists. This dual testing protocol ensures that properties meet safety standards before residents return to the space. The company accepts various forms of documentation, including photographs, videos, and virtual consultations, to assess areas of concern and provide rapid response solutions.

Beyond standard remediation services, Disaster Plus addresses the root causes of mold growth, including air conditioner leaks, broken pipes, appliance malfunctions, and storm damage. The company's technicians are IICRC certified and maintain current training on the latest remediation technologies and safety protocols.

"Property owners often wait too long to address mold issues, which can lead to structural damage and potential insurance claim denials," added Norris. "Early intervention not only protects the property but also safeguards the health of occupants who may be sensitive to mold exposure."

Disaster Plus has served the greater Charleston area since 1986, providing water damage restoration, mold remediation, fire and smoke damage restoration, odor abatement, biohazard cleanup, and sewage removal services. The locally owned and operated company maintains 24/7 availability for emergency response and works with all major insurance carriers. Their service area includes Charleston, Daniel Island, Folly Beach, Mount Pleasant, and surrounding communities throughout South Carolina.
