Miami, Florida based SeaLife.gifts has announced the launch of their new online ocean themed gift shop. The online store currently contributes 5 to 25 percent of every order to help preserve oceans and the life within them.

Tim Robitaille, co-owner of the company states, "We love animals, and want to provide our customers with what we believe really expresses our love of sea life." Robitaille and his wife co-founded the company and say that their love of the ocean world is what prompted them to open their online store. He states that the company will be offering a wide range of pieces from jewelry to home decor, and apparel. "All of our products in the new store are of course high quality, and we have a great selection of something for everyone," Robitaille says.

In addition to the website and online store, the company has set up a Google+ page that they say customers can join to receive updates and promotional information. The new store offers categories for jewelry that include octopus, dolphins, turtles, and starfish. Also included on the site is a section for home decor that has pillows, shower curtains, and other home necessities, and an apparel section with t-shirts and other clothing pieces, all adorned with sea creatures of some sort. "It's just an entire theme of our love for sea life," says Robitaille.

Robitaille points out that the new online store is now live and customers can begin shopping immediately. He says that the company will begin with a base 5 percent contribution on all products that they sell, but that some collections will carry increases of up to 25 percent that will be donated towards efforts for conserving ocean life. The company supports a number of non-profit organizations, and plans to use the new online store to keep customers updated monthly about new happenings within the company as well as the ocean world.

Those who are looking to learn more can join the company on any of their social media accounts to keep updated or visit the new online store where more information can be found about product offerings as well as contributions to the ocean world.
