Outcomes Only Announces Innovative Relationship Training Programs to Transform Communication and Connection

September 16, 2025

Pensacola, FL - September 16, 2025 -

Outcomes Only, the relationship training company founded by Julie Nise, announces expanded programs designed to help couples and individuals master communication patterns and create lasting positive change in their relationships. The company's forward-focused approach represents a significant departure from traditional relationship therapy methods. The expansion comes as Nise prepares to release her upcoming book, Romance ESP, which promises to provide comprehensive insights into what she calls the "sixth sense" of relationships. With over 20 years of experience transforming thousands of relationships, Nise has developed a methodology that focuses on practical skills training rather than analyzing past conflicts.

"Most traditional therapy methods keep people stuck in endless discussions about what went wrong," said Julie Nise, Founder and Lead Relationship Trainer at Outcomes Only. "My approach is completely different. As a relationship expert, I focus on training people in the specific skills they need to create the relationships they want, rather than dwelling on past pain and blame."The Outcomes Only methodology emphasizes recognizing unconscious influences and predictable patterns in relationships before problems arise. This proactive approach has garnered national attention, including multiple appearances on the Dr. Phil Show, where Nise provided transformative guidance to couples facing significant challenges. One notable case involved Nise's work with George and Liz Hooker, parents of the world's only deaf-blind triplets, where her intervention helped save their marriage under extraordinary circumstances. This case exemplified the practical, results-oriented nature of her training methods.

The company's programs address various relationship dynamics, from couples on the brink of divorce to business leaders seeking to improve team communication. Nise's training incorporates elements such as the Forgiveness Theatre Framework, which provides actionable steps for repairing hurt and building stronger bonds. Unlike traditional counseling that may extend for months or years without measurable progress, Outcomes Only focuses on delivering tangible results through skill development. Participants learn to anticipate relationship patterns, master effective communication techniques, and develop what Nise describes as an "advanced understanding" that empowers them to build connections based on empathy and trust. The training programs also address contemporary relationship challenges, including recognizing and escaping toxic relationships and trauma bonds. This comprehensive approach helps individuals identify unhealthy patterns and develop the tools necessary to establish healthier connections. Nise's forthcoming book, Romance ESP, will expand on these concepts, offering readers practical strategies for developing intuitive connection abilities and creating flourishing relationships in both personal and professional contexts.

Outcomes Only represents a paradigm shift in relationship support, moving away from the traditional therapeutic model toward a training-based approach that emphasizes skill development and forward momentum. The company continues to expand its offerings through private coaching sessions, workshops, and corporate training programs designed to improve communication and leadership effectiveness. Based in Pensacola, Florida, Outcomes Only has established itself as a pioneer in relationship training, helping individuals, couples, and organizations achieve breakthrough results through practical, skills-based interventions that focus on creating positive outcomes rather than analyzing problems.
