The locally owned landscaping company has mobilized its winter service teams to help property owners prepare outdoor spaces for the approaching cold season. Services include final lawn treatments, irrigation system winterization, snow removal planning, and holiday lighting installation to ensure properties remain protected and accessible through the winter months.

"Winter preparation requires specific timing and expertise to protect landscape investments from freeze damage," said Johnny Lazear, a spokesperson for The Grounds Guys of Rapid City. "Our teams are implementing winterization protocols that address South Dakota's harsh winter conditions while positioning landscapes for healthy spring recovery."

The company's winter service portfolio encompasses snow plowing, ice management, salting and sanding operations, and snow relocation services. Professional landscaping in Rapid City during the winter months involves understanding freeze-thaw cycles, snow load management, and proper de-icing techniques that minimize damage to hardscape and plant materials.

Pre-winter landscape services include final fertilization applications, pruning of trees and shrubs, mulch installation for root protection, and drainage system inspections. The company also provides irrigation system blow-outs to prevent pipe freezing and equipment damage during cold periods.

Commercial properties receive customized snow management contracts that outline response times, service frequencies, and liability considerations. The Grounds Guys of Rapid City maintains equipment, including plows, spreaders, and loaders, to handle varying snow accumulation levels throughout the winter season.
