October 02, 2025

VALENCIA, CA - October 02, 2025 -
Promeza MG announces that author and registered nurse Raul Meza has expanded his speaking engagements across the United States and internationally, following increased demand for his presentations on critical care experiences and spiritual encounters documented in his book "Injection of Faith."

The book, which draws from Meza's 32 years of experience as a critical care nurse, presents real-life accounts from the intensive care unit, including documented Near Death Experience Stories that have resonated with both medical professionals and faith communities. The collection features inspirational accounts of patients who have reported extraordinary experiences during critical medical events, offering readers perspectives on miracles and spiritual encounters in healthcare settings.

Meza's speaking schedule now includes nursing conferences, churches, and healthcare institutions throughout the United States, with recent international tours extending to Mexico and Argentina. The presentations combine medical expertise with spiritual insights, addressing audiences in both English and Spanish through his bilingual capabilities.

"The response to these stories has been remarkable across different audiences," said Betty Meza, spokesperson for Promeza MG. "Healthcare professionals appreciate the clinical perspective combined with the human element, while faith communities find deep meaning in these accounts of NDE's and miraculous recoveries. The international demand demonstrates that these experiences transcend cultural and linguistic boundaries."

The book exists in both English and Spanish versions, with "Inyección de Fe" serving Spanish-speaking communities. This dual-language approach has enabled Meza to reach diverse audiences across North and South America, sharing accounts that challenge conventional understanding of consciousness and spirituality in medical settings.

Meza's presentations at nursing conferences have gained particular attention for their unique blend of clinical expertise and spiritual observation. His 32-year career in critical care provides credibility and depth to the accounts he shares, offering healthcare professionals insights into patient experiences that extend beyond traditional medical documentation.

The speaking tours have taken Meza to venues ranging from local churches to international conventions in Las Vegas, Los Angeles, and as far as Yiwu, China. Each presentation adapts to its audience while maintaining focus on the core message of hope and faith found within intensive care experiences.

Raul Meza continues to work as a registered nurse while fulfilling speaking engagements, bringing current perspectives from active medical practice to his presentations. This ongoing clinical involvement ensures that his message remains relevant and grounded in contemporary healthcare experiences.

Promeza MG, the publishing company behind "Injection of Faith," specializes in inspirational literature that bridges healthcare and spirituality. The company distributes both print and digital versions of the book through various platforms, making these accounts accessible to readers seeking comfort and understanding during health crises or spiritual exploration.
