The Sharma Law Firm Expands Services with New Office Location

October 07, 2025

WILMINGTON, DE - October 07, 2025 -
The Sharma Law Firm has announced the opening of its new office at 2500 Grubb Rd #13 in Wilmington, Delaware. The expansion provides residents of northern Delaware with increased access to legal services in the area of personal injury law.

The Sharma Law Firm, founded by attorney Aman K. Sharma, Esq., has established itself in Delaware by concentrating exclusively on personal injury matters. The practice represents clients in cases such as car accidents, slip and fall incidents, motorcycle crashes, workplace injuries, and other situations where negligence has caused harm. By narrowing its focus to this area of law, the firm has developed a detailed understanding of the challenges faced by injury victims and the legal strategies most effective in addressing them.

The decision to open a Wilmington office reflects the firm?s observation of rising demand for personal injury representation in New Castle County. Northern Delaware is home to a large population that frequently relies on regional medical centers, major highways, and busy workplaces. As a result, residents are more likely to encounter situations that lead to serious accidents or disputes with insurance companies. Establishing a physical presence in Wilmington enables the firm to be closer to these communities and to respond more effectively to the legal needs of local clients.

Attorney Aman K. Sharma explained that accessibility was a central factor in choosing Wilmington for expansion: ?Our goal has always been to provide clients with legal support that is both knowledgeable and approachable. By opening an office in Wilmington, we are making it easier for people in the northern part of the state to consult with us without having to travel long distances. We believe this step will allow us to better serve individuals and families who need help after an accident.?

The Wilmington office will operate alongside the firm?s existing locations in Delaware, allowing the practice to handle a larger caseload while maintaining its commitment to personalized attention. According to the firm, each case is prepared with careful evaluation of evidence, detailed knowledge of applicable laws, and strategies designed around the client?s specific circumstances. This approach aims to give clients a clearer understanding of their legal options while providing support during what is often a stressful recovery process.

In addition to handling litigation, the firm provides guidance on dealing with medical expenses, lost income, and insurance disputes that often follow an injury. Many accident victims face uncertainty about how to manage these challenges, and the Wilmington office is intended to offer a local resource for people who need both information and representation.

While the firm has emphasized compassion and advocacy in the past, the new office represents a practical step forward in its mission to make legal services more available across Delaware. By being closer to a larger segment of the population, The Sharma Law Firm expects to increase its capacity to assist clients with both straightforward and complex injury cases.

The Wilmington location also underscores the firm?s long-term strategy of building a statewide presence. With personal injury cases frequently requiring local knowledge of courts, medical providers, and insurance practices, having offices in multiple parts of the state gives the firm the flexibility to adapt to the needs of clients in different regions.

Sharma emphasized that the firm?s work remains centered on representing injury victims and pursuing fair outcomes: ?Every client?s case is important to us. We approach each situation with the aim of helping people navigate a system that can feel overwhelming. Our Wilmington office is one more way we are working to ensure that access to legal representation is available to as many Delaware residents as possible.?

For residents of Wilmington and nearby communities, the opening of this office provides an additional option for those seeking legal assistance after an accident. The Sharma Law Firm states that it remains committed to helping clients understand their rights, evaluate their cases, and pursue the compensation they may be entitled to under Delaware law.
