October 20, 2025 -

The Law Offices of Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., PC has introduced a comprehensive Georgia Workers' Compensation Settlement chart designed to help injured workers understand the typical settlement values for various workplace injuries. The educational resource addresses a critical knowledge gap for employees navigating the complex workers' compensation system in Georgia.

The newly released settlement chart provides detailed information about compensation ranges for different injury types, from minor workplace incidents to catastrophic injuries. The resource aims to empower injured workers with knowledge about fair compensation standards, enabling them to make informed decisions during the claims process.

"Most injured workers enter the workers' compensation process without any frame of reference for what constitutes fair compensation," said Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., founding attorney at the Law Offices of Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., PC. "This settlement chart provides crucial transparency that has been missing from the system, giving workers the information they need to evaluate settlement offers and understand their rights."

The settlement chart covers a comprehensive range of workplace injuries commonly seen in Georgia, including back and neck injuries, spinal cord damage, traumatic brain injuries, and injuries specific to high-risk industries such as construction and delivery services. Each injury category includes typical settlement ranges based on severity and long-term impact on the worker's ability to earn a living.

As a former insurance defense attorney, Izquierdo brings unique insight into how insurance companies evaluate and settle workers' compensation claims. This perspective has informed the development of the settlement chart, which reflects real-world settlement patterns observed across Georgia's workers' compensation system.

The release of this educational tool comes at a time when workplace injury rates remain a significant concern across Georgia's diverse industries, from the bustling operations at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta Airport to manufacturing facilities and construction sites throughout the metro Atlanta area. Many workers face the challenge of navigating the Workers' Compensation Settlement process without adequate information about typical compensation amounts.

The settlement chart also addresses the complexities of calculating settlements for permanent partial disability, temporary total disability, and cases requiring ongoing medical treatment. By providing this information in an accessible format, the firm aims to level the playing field between injured workers and insurance companies during settlement negotiations.

Beyond serving as a reference tool, the chart helps workers identify when they might need professional legal representation. Understanding typical settlement values can alert workers to potentially inadequate offers and prompt them to seek appropriate legal counsel before accepting a settlement that may not fully address their needs.

The Law Offices of Humberto Izquierdo, Jr., PC specializes in personal injury and workers' compensation cases throughout Georgia. The firm represents workers from various industries, including construction workers, delivery drivers, airport employees, and manufacturing plant workers. With offices in Cumming, the firm provides bilingual services in both English and Spanish, serving Georgia's diverse workforce. The firm operates on a contingency fee basis and offers free consultations to injured workers seeking to understand their rights and options under Georgia's workers' compensation laws. Any work injury attorney at the firm can provide guidance on using the settlement chart effectively during the claims process.
