Mogy Law Firm Addresses Rising Highway Accidents on Interstate Corridors

October 09, 2025

MEMPHIS, TN - October 09, 2025 -
Mogy Law Firm, based in Tennessee, has expanded its personal injury practice to address the growing number of severe collisions occurring on Memphis interstate highways, particularly along the I-40 corridor where recent crashes have resulted in life-threatening injuries and significant traffic disruptions.

The Memphis-based law firm's expansion comes as recent reports reveal that interstate accidents in the Memphis metropolitan area are a significant problem, with the I-40 corridor experiencing particularly dangerous conditions. Recent incidents include a two-vehicle crash that left one driver with critical injuries and a tractor-trailer collision that created hours of rush-hour delays, highlighting the ongoing safety challenges facing Memphis commuters.

"Interstate accident cases present unique legal complexities that require specialized knowledge and experience," said Eric Mogy, Founder and Owner at Mogy Law Tennessee. "These cases often involve multiple jurisdictions, commercial vehicle regulations, and insurance companies from different states. When someone is injured in a highway collision, having an experienced car accident lawyer becomes essential to navigate these intricate legal matters and secure fair compensation."

The firm's analysis of highway accident patterns in Memphis reveals that speeding accounts for a percentage of interstate collisions, while distracted driving contributes as well. Commercial vehicle involvement adds additional complications, as these cases frequently involve federal transportation regulations and corporate liability issues. Average settlement amounts for highway accident victims in Tennessee range from $75,000 to $250,000, depending on injury severity and liability factors.

Mogy Law Tennessee's expanded focus on interstate accident cases includes comprehensive investigation services, accident reconstruction analysis, and coordination with medical professionals to document injury impacts. The firm operates on a contingency basis, meaning clients pay no fees unless their case results in compensation.

"The aftermath of a highway accident can be overwhelming for victims and their families," noted Mogy. "Beyond the immediate medical concerns, people face mounting bills, insurance disputes, and often cannot return to work. As a Mogy Law Firm personal injury lawyer, my role extends beyond legal representation to helping clients access the resources they need during recovery while we pursue maximum compensation for their losses."

The firm's attorneys bring extensive experience in Tennessee personal injury law, including knowledge of state-specific statutes of limitations, comparative fault rules, and damage calculation methods. Their practice encompasses various accident types, from standard passenger vehicle collisions to complex multi-vehicle commercial crashes.

Mogy Law Tennessee serves the greater Memphis area with comprehensive legal services in personal injury, criminal defense, and landlord rights. The firm's personal injury division handles cases involving car accidents, motorcycle collisions, pedestrian injuries, rideshare accidents, and commercial vehicle crashes. Founded by Eric Mogy, the practice maintains a commitment to accessible legal representation, including Spanish-language services for non-English speaking clients. The firm offers free case evaluations to help accident victims understand their legal options and potential compensation eligibility.
