(San Diego, CA) - Rooter Hero Plumbing in San Diego County stresses the importance of LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) upgrades. These improvements help San Diego commercial property owners save a lot of money while protecting the environment. Companies that make the necessary changes to upgrade their systems may also be eligible for government rebates.

Company spokesperson for Rooter Hero Plumbing of San Diego County, Jessica Perrault, says: "Receiving LEED credits on plumbing is a fantastic way to cut operating costs and be a part of helping the environment. These credits are referred to as 'green credits' and not without good reason. They help to save a significant amount of resources and water, which means our planet will be better off for it as well. As an added benefit, these credits help companies keep energy costs low."

The fact that LEED certification is a green certification is of particular interest as well. It is a known fact that consumers actively look for companies that are committed to the green agenda. Even well into the 21st century, households recycle more than businesses. Companies that take the initiative to retrofit plumbing fixtures reap the rewards. Rooter Hero Plumbing wants to make it easier for companies to qualify for rebates and conserve water by offering free LEED evaluations and affordable retrofitting options.

"When a consumer sees that a commercial property has LEED certification, they are more inclined to shop there," adds Jessica Perrault. "This is true for businesses, and also for landlords. They can charge higher rents, for instance, because people are willing to pay to save the planet. Of course, we feel that commercial properties overall should be committed to going green, as we only have one planet to live on."

Rooter Hero Plumbing is known in the community as the leading commercial plumbing company in San Diego because of the quality of their services.
