December 05, 2025 -
Spears AC & Heating, a League City-based HVAC contractor with over 20 years of industry experience, has expanded its service area to include Texas City, Texas. The expansion brings comprehensive heating, ventilation, and air conditioning services to residential and commercial customers throughout the coastal community.

The expansion into Texas City represents a strategic move for the company as it continues to grow its presence throughout the Bay Area Houston region. The company now serves eleven communities including Clear Lake, Dickinson, Friendswood, Kemah, La Porte, League City, Nassau Bay, San Leon, Seabrook, Texas City, and Tiki Island.

"Texas City residents deserve reliable HVAC services from a company that understands the unique challenges of coastal climate conditions," said Steve Spears, founder of Spears AC & Heating. "With hurricane season bringing power outages and the Gulf Coast humidity putting extra strain on air conditioning systems, we recognized the need for experienced technicians who can respond quickly to emergency repairs and maintenance needs."

The company offers a full range of HVAC services including air conditioning installation, repair, and replacement; heating system installation and maintenance; furnace services; commercial HVAC solutions; and duct cleaning and air quality services. The expansion allows Texas City residents and businesses to access emergency repair services, routine maintenance, and new system installations from certified technicians.

Spears AC & Heating services all major HVAC brands including Bryant, Trane, Carrier, Rheem, Goodman, and Lennox. The company has built its reputation on providing reliable service at competitive prices, with customers typically spending $200 less on average compared to other providers without compromising quality or service standards.

The Texas City expansion comes as the company marks two decades in the HVAC industry. Initially working with established local companies, Steve Spears launched his independent operation to provide more personalized service and competitive pricing to Bay Area Houston communities. The company maintains Better Business Bureau accreditation and offers free quotes and second opinions on all HVAC projects.

"Our expansion into Texas City reflects our commitment to serving the entire Bay Area Houston region with professional HVAC services," added Spears. "We understand that reliable climate control is essential for both comfort and safety, especially in a community that faces extreme weather conditions ranging from humid summers to occasional winter freezes."

The company provides 24/7 emergency service for urgent HVAC issues, recognizing that system failures can occur at any time and require immediate attention. Commercial clients in Texas City can also access specialized services designed for business environments, including comprehensive maintenance programs and large-scale installation projects.

Spears AC & Heating maintains its headquarters in League City while expanding its service territory to meet growing demand for experienced HVAC contractors throughout the region. The company continues to focus on customer satisfaction through professional service delivery, transparent pricing, and technical expertise across all major HVAC system brands and models.
