

A&M Roofing Announces Expansion of Manufacturer Certifications

October 23, 2025

SPRINGFIELD, VA - October 23, 2025 -
A&M Roofing, a roofing and exterior remodeling company serving Northern Virginia since 2005, has announced the completion of additional manufacturer certifications across multiple product lines, expanding its authorized installer network status for residential and commercial properties throughout the region.

The Springfield-based roofing contractor has secured new certifications from Velux for skylight installations and Mastic for siding systems, adding to its existing accreditations from national shingle manufacturers. These certifications enable the company to offer extended manufacturer warranties and specialized installation techniques for properties across Northern Virginia.

"Obtaining these additional certifications reflects our ongoing investment in technical training and industry standards," said Mark Collins, Owner of A&M Roofing. "Each certification requires specific training protocols and demonstrated installation competency, which allows us to provide manufacturer-backed warranties that many contractors in the region cannot offer."

The expanded certifications cover multiple exterior remodeling categories. The Velux Certified Installer designation encompasses sun tunnels, solar-powered skylights with integrated rain sensors, and skylight blind systems. The Mastic Preferred Siding Contractor status applies to vinyl and insulated siding products designed for Mid-Atlantic climate conditions.

The company's certification portfolio now includes authorized installer status for asphalt shingles, synthetic slate systems, flat roofing membranes, and metal roofing panels. Window and door installation authorizations cover ProVia and Simonton product lines, while gutter system certifications include Leaf Relief guard products.

These manufacturer partnerships require annual recertification and adherence to specific installation protocols. Contractors must maintain insurance thresholds, complete continuing education requirements, and submit to periodic quality audits. In Northern Virginia, fewer than 15 percent of contractors maintain multiple manufacturer certifications across different product categories.

The certifications coincide with updated building codes in several Northern Virginia jurisdictions that now require specific energy efficiency ratings for exterior renovations. Properties undergoing roof replacement must meet new insulation standards, while window and door replacements must achieve minimum thermal performance ratings.

"The regulatory landscape for exterior remodeling has evolved significantly over the past five years," added Collins. "Having manufacturer certifications ensures our installations meet both current code requirements and warranty specifications, which protects property owners during the permit and inspection process."

The company maintains active memberships with the Virginia Association of Roofing Professionals and the Northern Virginia Chamber of Commerce. Industry data indicates that certified contractors complete projects with 40 percent fewer warranty claims compared to non-certified installers, according to the National Roofing Contractors Association.

A&M Roofing operates from its Springfield, Virginia headquarters, providing roofing, skylight, window, door, siding, and gutter system installation services to residential and commercial properties. The company maintains Better Business Bureau accreditation and holds manufacturer certifications from Velux, Mastic, ProVia, Simonton, and James Hardie, along with authorized installer status from multiple roofing material manufacturers.
