

Promeza MG Announces International Tour Schedule for Author of NDE Accounts Book

October 22, 2025

VALENCIA, CA - October 22, 2025 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Promeza MG announces an expanded international speaking tour schedule for critical care nurse and author Raul Meza, whose book "Injection of Faith" documents patient accounts of near-death experiences from his 32-year career in intensive care units.

The speaking tour includes confirmed engagements at nursing conferences and religious venues across the United States, Mexico, and Argentina. Meza will present in both English and Spanish, discussing documented Near Death Experience Stories collected during his decades of critical care nursing practice.

The tour expansion follows publication of "Injection of Faith," which compiles firsthand patient accounts and medical observations from intensive care settings. The book's Spanish edition, "Inyeccion de Fe," enables presentations to Spanish-speaking healthcare professionals and community groups in Latin America.

"Medical professionals are increasingly interested in understanding patient-reported experiences during critical illness," said Betty Meza, spokesperson for Promeza MG. "These documented accounts from three decades of ICU practice provide valuable insights for healthcare workers who encounter similar patient reports."

Raul Meza brings direct clinical experience to discussions of near-death phenomena, having worked as a registered nurse in critical care units since the early 1990s. His presentations at nursing conferences address documentation and patient care considerations when individuals report NDE's during recovery from life-threatening conditions.

The speaking engagements cover different aspects depending on the venue. Healthcare conference presentations focus on clinical observations and patient care protocols, while church appearances discuss the spiritual dimensions of reported experiences. Both formats draw from the same collection of documented cases compiled in the book.

The international component of the tour reflects growing interest in near-death experience accounts across different cultures and healthcare systems. Mexican and Argentinian religious institutions have scheduled presentations for nursing staff and medical students, seeking perspectives on patient-reported phenomena in critical care settings.

Promeza Publishing, the publishing division of Promeza MG, released "Injection of Faith" in digital and print formats. The book represents part of the company's catalog focusing on healthcare narratives and patient experiences. Distribution includes e-commerce platforms and digital reading devices.

The speaking tour schedule marks a shift for Promeza MG from primarily publishing activities to live educational events. This development aligns with increased academic and clinical interest in understanding patient-reported experiences during medical crises.

Raul Meza's background combines clinical practice with documentation of patient narratives, positioning him to address both medical and general audiences on the topic of near-death experiences. His presentations draw from specific cases encountered during his nursing career, providing context for healthcare professionals managing patients who report such experiences.

Promeza MG specializes in publishing works that document healthcare experiences and patient narratives. The company focuses on making medical stories accessible to professional and general readerships through various distribution channels.
