October 23, 2025

MONETT, MO - October 23, 2025 -
Davis & Son, a Southwest Missouri HVAC and plumbing company with over four decades of experience, announces the expansion of its commercial heating services to meet growing demand from businesses preparing for the winter season. The expansion addresses the increasing need for reliable commercial furnace maintenance and repair services across multiple counties in the region.

The expanded commercial heating services include comprehensive furnace inspections, preventive maintenance programs, and emergency repair services specifically designed for commercial properties. Davis & Son Heating Contractor now offers enhanced diagnostic capabilities and repair techniques for commercial-grade equipment, covering a wide range of systems and brands throughout Barry, Lawrence, Christian, Greene, Jasper, Newton, McDonald, and Stone counties.

"Commercial heating systems require specialized expertise and timely attention to prevent costly disruptions during the coldest months of the year," said Kristen, a spokesperson for Davis & Son. "Our expanded services ensure that businesses throughout Southwest Missouri can maintain optimal heating performance while reducing energy costs and extending equipment lifespan."

The timing of this expansion aligns with seasonal preparation needs as businesses evaluate their heating systems before peak winter demand. Regular commercial furnace maintenance can reduce heating costs significantly while preventing unexpected system failures that could result in temporary closures and lost revenue. The company's technicians have completed advanced training in the latest diagnostic and repair techniques for commercial-grade heating equipment.

Davis & Son furnace repair services now include 24-hour emergency response for commercial clients, recognizing that heating failures can occur at any time and impact business operations. The company's commercial heating division utilizes cutting-edge diagnostic technology to identify potential issues before they become major problems, helping businesses avoid unexpected downtime during critical operating hours.

The expansion builds upon the company's established reputation for residential heating services, bringing the same commitment to reliability and technical expertise to the commercial sector. Commercial clients benefit from customized maintenance agreements tailored to their specific equipment and operational requirements, ensuring consistent heating performance throughout the winter season.

The company's service expansion comes as regional businesses face increasing pressure to maintain efficient heating systems amid rising energy costs. The enhanced commercial services include detailed system assessments that identify inefficiencies and recommend improvements to reduce operational expenses. Davis & Son technicians provide comprehensive reports following each service visit, documenting system conditions and any recommended maintenance actions.

Davis & Son has served Southwest Missouri since its founding over 40 years ago, providing heating, cooling, and plumbing solutions for homes and businesses throughout the region.
