Mountaintop Web Design Completes Brand Refresh and Website Development for Federal Steel Systems

October 28, 2025

GREENWOOD VILLAGE, CO - October 28, 2025 -
Mountaintop Web Design, a digital marketing agency specializing in website development and online presence optimization, recently completed a comprehensive website redesign and brand refresh project for Federal Steel Systems, a provider of pre-engineered steel building kits.

The partnership between the two companies resulted in a modernized digital presence for Federal Steel Systems, featuring enhanced user experience design and improved functionality to better serve customers seeking steel building solutions for residential, commercial, agricultural, and industrial applications.

"Federal Steel Systems recently chose Mountaintop Web Design to build our new website, and we are very pleased with the new website and can't thank Mountaintop enough for their support and communication throughout the process," said a representative from Federal Steel Systems.

The project encompassed a complete overhaul of the Federal Steel Systems website, incorporating contemporary design elements and streamlined navigation to help potential customers more easily explore the company's range of steel building kits and accessories. The new website features improved product showcases, clearer pricing information, and enhanced tools for requesting quotes and accessing engineering drawings.

"This project exemplifies our commitment to helping businesses establish a strong digital foundation that supports their growth objectives," said Josiah Bussing, Creative Director at Mountaintop Web Design. "Working with Federal Steel Systems allowed us to demonstrate how strategic web design and brand messaging can transform how a company connects with its customers in the digital space."

The collaboration focused on creating a website that effectively communicates Federal Steel Systems' commitment to ethical business practices, transparent pricing, and ongoing customer support. The redesigned platform now better highlights the company's comprehensive steel building packages, which include engineered drawings ready for permit approval and continuous support throughout the building process.

Mountaintop Web Design implemented various optimization strategies during the development process, ensuring the new website performs effectively across all devices and search platforms. The agency's approach included incorporating local search optimization techniques and search engine optimization best practices to improve the website's visibility to potential customers searching for steel building solutions.

The completed website serves as a central hub for Federal Steel Systems' diverse customer base, which includes clients seeking steel structures for aviation, municipal, religious, and self-storage purposes. The improved digital platform facilitates easier access to information about various panel types, door options, insulation choices, and other building accessories.

Based at 8400 E Prentice Ave Ph 1500, Greenwood Village, CO 80111, Mountaintop Web Design provides comprehensive digital marketing services including website design, WordPress care, local search optimization, search engine optimization, and pay-per-click advertising management. The agency specializes in creating strategically crafted websites designed to help businesses grow their online presence and generate qualified leads.
