Holloway Removals & Storage Celebrates Partnership Supporting Native Bee Conservation

October 29, 2025

SYDNEY, NSW - October 29, 2025 -
Holloway Removals & Storage has been recognized by the Billion Bees Foundation for its instrumental role in supporting Australia's largest native stingless bee recovery program following the devastating Black Summer bushfires. The partnership demonstrates how the company's nationwide logistics network and storage solutions have extended beyond traditional moving services to support critical environmental conservation efforts.

The Billion Bees Foundation recently acknowledged Holloway Removals & Storage for providing essential logistics support throughout the federally funded Black Summer Bushfire Recovery Program. The initiative required complex coordination to deliver specialized bee habitat boxes and materials across New South Wales and Queensland, connecting community Mensheds with completed hives destined for public and private lands.

Despite facing unprecedented challenges, including COVID-19 restrictions, two major floods, and three consecutive La Niña weather events, the removal and storage company maintained consistent support for the conservation project. The company provided warehouse space at no cost, handled specialized equipment with care, and made loading dock facilities available at short notice to ensure the program's success.

"Supporting the Billion Bees Foundation's recovery program aligned perfectly with our commitment to serving Australian communities beyond just moving interstate or providing storage," said Joel Kristensen, Marketing Manager at Holloway Removals & Storage. "Our team understood the critical importance of this conservation effort, and we were honored to contribute our logistics expertise and infrastructure to help restore native bee populations affected by the bushfires."

The partnership showcased the company's evolution from founder Andy Holloway's humble beginnings in 2012, when he operated a single van moving band equipment around Bondi. Today, the company operates more than 70 vehicles with over 100+ team members providing comprehensive removal and storage services across Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, and interstate routes to Canberra, Adelaide, Perth, and Hobart.

Holloway Removals & Storage has built its reputation on versatility and reliability, offering services ranging from residential moves and office relocations to specialized handling of arts and antiques. The company maintains accreditation with the Australian Furniture Removers Association and membership in the Self Storage Association of Australasia, reflecting its commitment to industry standards and professional excellence.

The Billion Bees Foundation specifically praised the company's nationwide reach and large Sydney-based warehouse facilities, which proved essential for the program's logistics requirements. The foundation noted that Holloway's support was crucial in ensuring that bee habitat materials reached their destinations safely and efficiently, contributing to the restoration of native pollinator populations across fire-affected regions.

The successful partnership illustrates how established logistics companies can play vital roles in environmental conservation efforts. By leveraging existing infrastructure and expertise, Holloway Removals & Storage demonstrated that commercial enterprises can make meaningful contributions to ecological recovery initiatives while maintaining their core business operations.

Holloway Removals & Storage continues to expand its services across Australia, maintaining facilities in major metropolitan areas while supporting both commercial and community initiatives. The company's growth from a one-person operation to a nationally recognized removal and storage provider reflects its adaptability and commitment to meeting diverse customer and community needs.
