March 07, 2016 -

Oceanville, New Jersey based CCO, Certification Coaching Organization, LLC, (CCO) has announced their newly updated CPC® Exam Preparation Course. Once each year, the company's courses are updated, and the new "Medical Coding Review Blitz" is now available for students.

Laureen Jandroep, CPC, CPC-I, COC, CMSCS, CHCI, CPPM, founder and CEO of CCO states, "We are very proud of the recent updates to our Medical Coding Review Blitz. This year, we continue to provide both a review of the subject matter and a guide to doing well on the CPC exam. We also demonstrate ways to go through the exam in the most efficient manner while making best use of the time allowed."

The updated 2016 course content and videos were recorded earlier this year and are now available for students to purchase online. The training is online-based for convenience, so students can access the materials anywhere or anytime.

Jandroep states that the newly updated course includes a number of medical coding tools, all designed to help students master their skills at their career path. "This year we have added several bonuses and resources in the member's area to complement our popular CPC exam preparation material," she says.

Along with the various course materials, classwork, and online support through the company's website, they also offer a Facebook page for medical coders, which gives information about the career in general and allows students to interact with others who have chosen this career path for themselves.

CCO teaches students using online articles, practice questions, and videos that are available throughout the company's website. They provide both paid and unpaid courses for a number of reviews and on demand classwork, and have also added a discussion board where students can talk or ask questions about the certification process or the classwork in general.

The company has provided medical course instruction to nearly 50,000 students since their founding in 2008. More about the company or the coursework required for a certification in medical coding can be seen on the Certification Coaching Organization, LLC official website. Classes are available at any time and the newly updated coursework is available for students to access immediately.
