

Daniel Hall Combined Enterprises Releases Course On Hiring An Online Virtual Assistant

March 07, 2016

March 07, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Daniel Hall Combined Enterprises has announced the launch of a new course, designed to teach business owners how to hire a skilled virtual assistant. The course focuses on how entrepreneurs can increase their productivity by hiring an experienced virtual assistant.

"People are using virtual assistants to really step up their game," states company spokesperson Luanna Rodham. "This course will show you why having a virtual assistant is so important and how it can really benefit you and your business."

The course focuses on how business owners can find and hire virtual assistants to help them to increase their daily productivity. An article seen at <https://www.udemy.com/how-to-hire-a-virtual-assistant-va-so-can-make-more-money/>, outlines how employers can actually be more productive and be more productive when they enlist the help of a virtual assistant.

Rodham states that this is what the company's course is designed to do. "We know people are making money," she states. "I mean, employers with virtual assistants have so much more time to focus on earning money, which is why we launched this course; to help those business owners who need an assistant learn how to find the right one for their specific business requirements."

In another article published by the Wall Street Journal, seen at <http://www.wsj.com/articles/SB10001424127887323764804578314310447128612>, it shows that virtual assistants are helping to run a number of major corporations. Those enlisting the assistance of another individual have much more time to focus on the things that can help their own businesses to run more smoothly. Eliminating worries of scheduling lunches or minor appointments can help to make anyone more productive, according to the WSJ article.

Still another article seen at <http://www.wsj.com/articles/SB10001424052748704198004575310710174207000>, again focuses on how virtual assistants can help businesses to overcome smaller obstacles that may be getting in the way of success. The company says that by hiring an assistant, executives find much more time to get more important job tasks done, as opposed to minor tasks such as scheduling, returning emails, and even making phone calls.

Business owners interested in learning more about how a virtual assistant can help them to increase their chances at success can learn more about the course by visiting the company on their official website.
