March 07, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Daniel Hall Combined Enterprises has announced the launch of a new course that is designed to help people learn how to build a million dollar retirement plan using 401k. The course, found at <https://www.udemy.com/take-the-bulletproof-401k-super-charger-rat-race-off-ramp/>, is a financial course aimed at helping people to understand retirement planning and effectively set a system into place to save for their future.

"Individuals, particularly the younger ones, just don't understand how vital retirement saving is," states course author and finance professor Dr. Scott Brown,. "Our goal is to teach not only the importance of planning, but effective strategies to do so."

Scott states that the requirements for the course are simple and that all that's required are basic math and reading skills, along with an internet connection to actually take the classes. In an article on PBS, found at <http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/frontline/film/retirement-gamble/>, experts state that planning for retirement can be a gamble, particularly for those who are not actively saving and putting their money into a solid 401k account.

"People have to plan for the future and unfortunately, many just never know what that will entail," states Dr Brown who is also a finance professor at a major state university. "Our course is designed to help them understand why they should plan and to show them what it takes to put a good plan into place."

The course includes more than one full hour of content and over 13 different lectures on retirement planning with more currently under production. It shows students how to arrange their employer sponsored 401k plan in the way that most finance experts agree it should be done, and helps to maximize the expected return of that plan by following simple averages.

At <http://finance.yahoo.com/news/retirement-revolution-failed-why-401-101900460.html>, the company says those interested can see how some retirement plans fail and why. Their goal is to set course students up for success by showing them simple strategies that can make all the difference.

Professor Brown states that anyone working for a living wage inside the United States or in Puerto Rico retirement law jurisdictions should take the course, which is offered conveniently online. The company says that anyone interested in learning more or those who may have specific questions about the course can reach them through their official website. Two new sections are forthcoming in the course. The next teaches taxpayers how to set up a fully self-directed individual 401(k) plan. And finally, Dr. Brown is adding a section on how to create a Roth IRA.
