November 04, 2025 -
Sullivan Brill Personal Injury Attorneys, a personal injury law firm, has announced an expansion of its legal services to include dedicated representation for bicycle accident cases. The extension of services reflects a growing need for legal advocacy as cycling continues to rise in popularity throughout New York City and surrounding areas.

?Our firm has long focused on representing individuals who have been seriously injured through no fault of their own,? said Joseph Sullivan, attorney at Sullivan Brill. ?As more New Yorkers take to cycling for transportation and recreation, expanding our practice in this area allows us to address a critical need for experienced legal support following collisions involving bicycles and motor vehicles.?

Cycling has become a common mode of transportation and recreation across New York City, from the boroughs to the suburban counties. However, the increase in ridership has also resulted in more reported collisions between cyclists and motor vehicles. According to recent traffic safety data, visibility issues, distracted driving, and failure to yield remain among the leading factors in such incidents. These accidents often result in severe injuries that require extensive recovery time and may impact a person?s ability to return to work or normal daily activities.

Sullivan Brill?s expansion into bicycle accident representation underscores its commitment to addressing the evolving landscape of personal injury law in urban environments. The firm handles cases involving collisions with motor vehicles, unsafe road conditions, and other negligence-based claims. Each case is managed by experienced attorneys who review accident circumstances, identify responsible parties, and guide clients through the civil claims process.

The firm?s approach emphasizes the importance of legal accountability for motorists whose inattention or aggressive behavior results in injury to cyclists. By pursuing claims under New York?s personal injury and traffic safety laws, the firm aims to help injured individuals secure fair compensation for medical expenses, rehabilitation, and other losses resulting from such accidents.

Sullivan Brill represents clients across all five boroughs of New York City, including Brooklyn, Queens, Manhattan, the Bronx, and Staten Island, as well as in Long Island, Westchester County, and Puerto Rico. With offices located at 50 Fountain Plaza, Suite 1400, Buffalo, NY 14202, the firm maintains a network of attorneys prepared to serve individuals throughout the state.

Founded with a mission to protect the rights of those harmed by negligence, Sullivan Brill has developed a broad practice encompassing personal injury, civil litigation, and other complex legal matters. The firm?s bicycle accident attorney work to ensure that accident victims understand their rights and available remedies under state law. This includes evaluating liability, handling insurance communications, and pursuing litigation where necessary to resolve disputes.

Bicycle accident cases often involve unique legal and factual considerations compared to other types of vehicle collisions. Establishing fault may require examination of traffic camera footage, witness testimony, and expert analysis regarding vehicle speed and visibility. Sullivan Brill?s legal team is equipped to coordinate these aspects of investigation, using documentation and expert input to strengthen claims and clarify the causes of each incident.

As the city continues to expand cycling infrastructure, such as protected lanes and public bike-share programs, legal frameworks surrounding cyclist safety remain a developing area of public interest. Law firms like Sullivan Brill play an important role in shaping accountability standards and supporting public awareness regarding traffic safety and the responsibilities of all road users.
