Project Brilliant Announces December Certified ScrumMaster Training

November 10, 2025

INDIANAPOLIS, IN - November 10, 2025 -
Project Brilliant, a leading Agile consulting and training firm, announces a rare in-person Certified ScrumMaster (CSM) training opportunity scheduled for December 15-16 in Indianapolis. The two-day intensive course marks a special return to classroom instruction for the company's Founder and CEO, Aaron Kopel, who typically focuses on one-on-one executive coaching engagements with chief information officers.

The upcoming CSM certification course addresses the growing demand for Agile-trained professionals across industries as organizations increasingly adopt Scrum methodologies to improve product delivery and team collaboration. The training combines hands-on activities with real-world case studies from both successful and unsuccessful Agile transformations, providing participants with practical insights they can apply immediately in their organizations.

"This December training represents a unique opportunity for professionals to learn directly from someone who spends most of their time coaching C-suite executives on Agile transformation," said Aaron Kopel, Founder and CEO of Project Brilliant. "The combination of classroom activities and real-world examples from my executive coaching practice creates an engaging learning environment that goes beyond theoretical knowledge to deliver practical, actionable skills."

The Certified ScrumMaster program serves professionals at all levels who work on Agile teams or interact with Agile practitioners in their organizations. The curriculum covers fundamental Scrum principles, team dynamics, sprint planning, and the critical role of the ScrumMaster in facilitating team success. Participants who complete the course and pass the certification exam earn the globally recognized CSM credential from the Scrum Alliance.

The timing of this training session aligns with many organizations' year-end planning cycles, allowing participants to enter the new year with enhanced Agile capabilities. As companies across sectors continue to navigate rapid market changes and digital transformation initiatives, the demand for certified Scrum practitioners has reached unprecedented levels.

"The energy and engagement in our classroom sessions create a dynamic learning experience that online training simply cannot replicate," added Kopel. "Participants leave not just with certification, but with a network of peers and practical strategies they can implement immediately."

Registration for the December 15-16 Indianapolis CSM training remains open with limited seats available. The intensive two-day format allows working professionals to gain certification without extended time away from their responsibilities.

Project Brilliant specializes in Agile consulting and training services designed to help organizations instill agility into their processes and culture. The company works with clients across multiple industries, including financial services, healthcare, retail, manufacturing, government, and technology sectors. Beyond certification training, the firm provides comprehensive Agile consulting services, leadership development programs, and advanced Scrum training, such as Advanced Certified ScrumMaster and Certified Scrum Product Owner certifications. The company maintains a commitment to knowledge sharing through free resources, offering an extensive Agile glossary, downloadable materials, and regular blog content addressing current Agile topics and trends.

###

For more information about Project Brilliant, contact the company here:Momentum LocksmithAaron Kopel(317) 646-4468aaron@projectbrilliant.com450 E 96th St #500, Indianapolis, IN 46240

Project Brilliant

Aaron Kopel has more than 25 years of experience. He combines deep knowledge and insight with practical real-world insights to help business and IT leaders navigate today?s hyper-changing environment.

Website: https://projectbrilliant.com/

Email: aaron@projectbrilliant.com

Phone: (317) 646-4468