

Best Awning Company Introduces Wind-Resistant Retractable Awnings for Denver Properties

November 14, 2025

Conifer, Colorado - November 14, 2025 -
Best Awning Company has introduced a new line of wind-resistant retractable awnings designed specifically for Colorado's challenging weather conditions, addressing increased demand for durable outdoor shade solutions across the Denver metropolitan area.

The newly launched collection features reinforced frame construction and advanced fabric technology engineered to withstand wind speeds up to 35 miles per hour, a significant improvement over standard retractable awning systems. The products incorporate heavy-duty aluminum frames with enhanced bracket systems and specialized fabric tensioning mechanisms developed for Front Range weather patterns.

"Wind resistance has been the primary concern for Denver property owners considering retractable awnings," said Tyler Coomes, Director of Operations at Best Awning Company. "These new systems address that challenge directly with engineering improvements that allow the awnings to remain deployed in conditions that would require standard models to be retracted."

The wind-resistant models join the company's existing product line as part of a broader expansion of retractable awning options for both residential and commercial applications. The systems feature automatic wind sensors that retract the awnings when wind speeds exceed safe operating limits, preventing potential damage during sudden weather changes common to the Denver area.

Best Awning Companys Retractable Denver Awnings now include models with reinforced lateral arm technology and upgraded mounting hardware designed to distribute wind load more effectively across the entire structure. The awnings are available in widths ranging from 8 to 40 feet, with projection distances up to 14 feet from the mounting surface.

Testing conducted at the company's Denver facility demonstrated the new systems' ability to maintain structural integrity during sustained winds and gusts typical of Colorado spring and fall seasons. The awnings underwent stress testing simulating various weather scenarios, including rapid temperature fluctuations and exposure to hail impact.

Installation of the wind-resistant models follows the same timeline as standard retractable awnings, with most projects completed within two to four weeks of design approval. The company's installation teams have received specialized training on the new mounting requirements and structural specifications unique to the enhanced models.

Commercial applications for the wind-resistant awnings include restaurant patios, retail storefronts, and outdoor event spaces where reliable shade coverage is essential for business operations. The systems allow businesses to maintain outdoor seating areas during variable weather conditions without frequent manual adjustments.

The introduction of wind-resistant technology represents a response to feedback from property owners who previously avoided retractable awnings due to concerns about Colorado's unpredictable weather. Market research conducted by the company indicated wind resistance as the top factor influencing purchasing decisions among Denver-area consumers.

"Property owners want the flexibility of retractable shade without worrying about weather-related damage," added Coomes. "These systems provide that peace of mind while maintaining the aesthetic appeal and functionality that make retractable awnings attractive."

Best Awning Company has been providing shade solutions to Denver area properties since 1979. The company specializes in retractable awnings, window awnings, metal awnings, pergola systems, and commercial installations, along with repair and fabric replacement services. Their product offerings include partnerships with manufacturers such as SunSetter and KE Awnings, providing access to materials and technology suited for Colorado's climate conditions.
