

A&M Roofing Highlights Growing Demand for Metal Panel Roofs

November 17, 2025

MCLEAN, VA - November 17, 2025 -
A&M Roofing, a McLean-based roofing contractor serving Northern Virginia for over twenty years, reports increased homeowner interest in metal panel roofs as property owners seek durable, long-lasting roofing solutions amid rising material costs and extreme weather events.

The roofing company, which maintains a perfect 5.0-star rating across 33 customer reviews, has observed a significant shift in customer preferences toward metal roofing systems over the past year. This trend reflects broader industry data showing metal roofing installations have increased nationwide as homeowners prioritize longevity and weather resistance.

"Metal Panel Roofs have become increasingly popular among our clients who want maximum protection and minimal maintenance," said Mark Collins, senior project manager at A&M Roofing. "These systems offer exceptional durability against severe weather conditions that we see throughout Northern Virginia, from heavy snow loads in winter to intense summer storms."

The growing interest in metal roofing comes as homeowners face more frequent severe weather events and seek roofing solutions that can withstand extreme conditions. Metal roofing systems typically last 40 to 70 years with proper installation, compared to 15 to 20 years for traditional asphalt shingles. This longevity makes them particularly attractive to homeowners planning to stay in their properties long-term.

A&M Roofing has expanded its metal roofing capabilities to meet this demand, ensuring its HAAG-certified technicians receive specialized training in metal roof installation techniques. The company emphasizes proper installation as critical to achieving the full benefits of metal roofing systems, including energy efficiency, fire resistance, and structural integrity.

Recent projects completed by the company demonstrate the versatility of metal roofing applications, from residential properties seeking enhanced curb appeal to commercial buildings requiring maximum weather protection. The company recently completed a weatherproofing project in Lorton, Virginia, incorporating high-performance synthetic underlayment beneath metal panels for enhanced moisture protection.

Beyond traditional Roof Installation services, A&M Roofing provides comprehensive roofing solutions, including complete roof replacements, routine maintenance, storm damage repairs, and detailed roof inspections. The company also offers gutter and siding services, providing integrated exterior solutions for both residential and commercial properties.

The shift toward metal roofing reflects broader changes in the construction industry as builders and homeowners adapt to changing climate patterns and seek sustainable building materials. Metal roofs are fully recyclable at the end of their service life and can reduce cooling costs by reflecting solar radiant heat.

A&M Roofing operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week, providing emergency services alongside scheduled installations and maintenance. The company offers financing options through Service Finance Company, LLC, making metal roofing upgrades accessible to a broader range of property owners.

Established as a licensed roofing contractor in Northern Virginia, A&M Roofing combines experienced contractors, quality materials, and industry certifications to deliver roofing solutions. The company serves McLean and surrounding communities throughout Northern Virginia, specializing in new roof installations, complete replacements, and comprehensive maintenance programs designed to extend roof lifespans and protect properties against weather-related damage.
