DAVENPORT, Iowa - November 26, 2025 -
Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC has expanded its educational outreach initiatives to help Quad Cities homeowners better understand heating, cooling, and plumbing system maintenance through enhanced digital resources and seasonal guidance programs.

The company, which has served the Quad Cities area since 1923, has developed comprehensive educational materials addressing common HVAC and plumbing concerns that homeowners face throughout the year. These resources cover essential topics ranging from furnace maintenance during colder months to air conditioning system preparation for summer, along with year-round plumbing service guidance.

"We recognize that many homeowners want to understand their home systems better, whether they're dealing with heating issues in winter or cooling problems during summer," said Bill Durand, General Manager at Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC. "Our expanded educational resources help customers identify potential issues early and understand when professional service is needed, ultimately helping them avoid costly emergency repairs."

The educational initiative includes detailed information about preventative maintenance programs, system efficiency optimization, and seasonal preparation tips. The company has also enhanced its digital presence, including its Youtube channel, where technicians demonstrate maintenance tips and explain common system issues. These video resources complement written guides and help homeowners visualize proper maintenance techniques.

Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC offers comprehensive services, including furnace repair and installation, air conditioning maintenance, and full-service plumbing solutions. The company's Service Partner Agreements provide annual maintenance programs starting at $99 for cooling systems and $119.40 for plumbing systems, including priority service and waived after-hours fees.

The expanded educational resources arrive as many Quad Cities residents face aging HVAC systems requiring more frequent maintenance. Recent industry data indicates that proper maintenance can extend system life by several years while reducing energy costs. The company's diagnostic protocols now include detailed assessments of refrigerant levels, electrical connections, condensate drainage systems, and overall system efficiency.

Homeowners seeking information about heating, cooling, or plumbing services can access these educational resources through multiple channels. The company also offers free estimates for system replacements and financing options through GreenSky for qualifying customers. Monthly specials provide additional savings opportunities for scheduled maintenance and installations.
