December 04, 2025

MEDIA, PA - December 04, 2025 -
Schuster Law has announced an expansion of its personal injury representation throughout Delaware County, Pennsylvania, reflecting its continued commitment to assisting individuals who have sustained injuries as a result of negligence or unsafe conditions. The firm?s Media-based office now provides comprehensive legal services covering a broad range of personal injury cases within the region.

?Each injury case presents distinct legal and factual issues that require careful evaluation,? said Ken R. Schuster, Esq., founder and managing attorney of Schuster Law. ?Our goal is to ensure that every case is examined according to Pennsylvania?s legal standards and that clients receive clear information about their options under state law.?

Founded in 1998, Schuster Law is headquartered in Media, Pennsylvania, and represents clients throughout Delaware County and neighboring communities. The firm focuses exclusively on civil litigation related to personal injury, offering representation in matters involving motor vehicle accidents, workplace incidents, premises liability, and nursing home neglect. Each case is analyzed for liability, causation, and damages under Pennsylvania statutes and case precedent.

The firm handles claims arising from automobile collisions, including car, truck, and motorcycle accidents, as well as pedestrian injuries involving negligent drivers. Attorneys review police reports, insurance documentation, and medical records to establish fault and evaluate potential compensation for losses such as medical costs, wage interruption, and long-term care needs. When applicable, the firm pursues uninsured or underinsured motorist claims to secure recovery for injured parties.

Premises liability cases also form a core part of Schuster Law?s practice. These include incidents resulting from slip-and-fall injuries, inadequate lighting, unsafe stairways, or property maintenance failures. The firm reviews maintenance logs, witness statements, and inspection records to determine whether property owners fulfilled their duty of care under Pennsylvania law. By applying established legal principles to factual investigation, the firm seeks to ensure that negligence is properly identified and supported by admissible evidence.

Schuster Law further represents construction and industrial workers injured on job sites, with attention to overlapping claims that may involve both workers? compensation and third-party negligence. The firm assists clients in understanding how separate legal avenues can operate concurrently, including cases involving defective equipment, subcontractor liability, and Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) compliance issues.

In addition to workplace and accident claims, the firm handles cases involving nursing home neglect and elder care negligence. These matters often involve failure to provide adequate supervision, improper medication management, or unsafe living conditions. Attorneys at Schuster Law evaluate care records, staff schedules, and regulatory reports to determine whether violations of state or federal standards occurred. The firm?s work in this area aims to uphold accountability within long-term care facilities while ensuring that families receive a clear understanding of available remedies.

Throughout all personal injury matters, Schuster Law operates under Pennsylvania?s comparative negligence system, which allows recovery even when multiple parties share fault. The firm ensures that clients understand how the state?s statute of limitations affects claim timing, and it works to preserve all available rights through timely filings and procedural compliance. Settlement discussions and litigation strategies are determined based on evidence and the probability of favorable resolution through negotiation or trial.

Schuster Law also emphasizes community education regarding legal rights after an injury. The firm maintains resources explaining how negligence is defined, how damages are calculated, and how insurance coverage interacts with personal injury law. These informational materials are available through the firm?s official website to help Delaware County residents understand the steps involved in pursuing a civil claim.

Ken R. Schuster, Esq., has practiced law for more than three decades and is admitted to both Pennsylvania state and federal courts. His experience includes litigation in diverse civil matters, and his leadership continues to guide the firm?s emphasis on thorough preparation, legal accuracy, and client transparency. Under his direction, the firm maintains active participation in professional organizations and continuing legal education programs related to trial advocacy and tort law.

The firm?s office in Media serves as a central resource for individuals across Delaware County, including residents of Chester, Upper Darby, Springfield, and surrounding communities. By providing representation across multiple categories of injury law, Schuster Law offers access to experienced counsel for those seeking to navigate Pennsylvania?s civil justice process.
