Construction Lawyers Brisbane Announces New Office Location

December 08, 2025

BRISBANE, QLD - December 08, 2025 -
Construction Lawyers Brisbane has relocated its office to a new address at Suite 140, 167 Eagle Street, Brisbane QLD 4000, Australia. This announcement sets out the updated office address for reference. Clients and other interested parties are encouraged to update their records to reflect the firm?s new office location details. Further enquiries about contact information are welcome through the office?s usual communication channels.

Public confirmation of an address change helps reduce uncertainty for clients and other interested parties. A written announcement provides clarity about which address should be used for future communications. Having clear, up-to-date details supports orderly communication and record-keeping. This announcement sets out the updated information in a concise and accessible form for anyone who needs the new address.

Many individuals dealing with building or property issues values a well-organised process for managing their affairs. Accurate address details are important so that records and other documents reflect the correct information. Updating the address ensures that references in documentation remain current and consistent. People involved in related matters are encouraged to use the updated address details wherever an address is required.

Ongoing matters remain subject to existing timelines. Clients with current files may wish to update their own records, including address books, and internal databases, to reflect the new address. Using the updated details wherever the firm is identified helps maintain continuity and supports accurate, well-organised records. Consistent address information reduces the risk of confusion or discrepancies between different documents and systems and helps keep administrative processes aligned with the firm?s current details.

Following the relocation of the firm, people using the firm?s Construction Lawyers Brisbane services for the first time benefit from clear information about the new address. Using the updated address on all documents helps keep information consistent across records. This reduces errors and confusion about which address should be used. Using the new address details helps maintain accuracy wherever the firm?s information needs to be recorded.

The relocation does not change the types of construction matters the firm can assist with, including issues such as delays, defects, or payment disputes. People can continue to seek assistance on the same range of topics that applied before the change of address. The approach remains focused on providing clear information, identifying the relevant facts, and considering each situation on its own circumstances.

Developers, builders, contractors, corporations, and other stakeholders dealing with construction-related concerns can expect the firm to remain focused on practical support and clear communication. Established processes are designed to give clients consistent information and predictable updates about their matters. These arrangements continue to apply, and enquiries are handled in an organised and reliable way.

The relocation represents an update to the firm?s recorded details rather than a change in its role or the nature of its work. Using the correct address information helps minimise disruption for clients, counterparties, and other stakeholders who interact with the firm in connection with construction issues. Consistent use of the updated details supports orderly administration and reduces the risk of confusion over where the firm is formally identified.

Construction Lawyers Brisbane issues this announcement to set out the firm?s updated address details. Future references to the firm are expected to rely on these updated details so that day-to-day dealings can continue without unnecessary complication. The relocation is an administrative update to the firm?s address details and does not alter its commitment to clear and organised communication in construction-related matters.

For inquiries, the new office is located at Suite 140, 167 Eagle Street, Brisbane QLD 4000, Australia. Additional information is available on their official website.
