Wexford Jewelers Announces 2025 Holiday Wish Book and Gift Guide

December 05, 2025

CADILLAC, MI - December 05, 2025 -
Wexford Jewelers has released its 2025 Holiday Wish Book and accompanying Gift Guide, which includes selections of fine jewelry with an emphasis on lab-grown diamonds and traditional gemstones. This development addresses growing preferences for sustainable and conflict-free options in the jewelry sector. The collections consist of various pieces designed for holiday gifting, personal milestones, and everyday wear, drawing from the store's established practices in curation and presentation.

The Holiday Wish Book contains necklaces, pendants, and rings constructed from materials such as 14K yellow gold and 14K white gold. Among the featured items are a diamond and emerald necklace that combines natural diamonds with emeralds, a natural pear-shaped ruby and diamond pendant, an oval sapphire and diamond tapered ring, and a marquise ruby and diamond halo ring. These selections incorporate gemstones, including emeralds, rubies, and sapphires, set in designs that follow conventional jewelry-making techniques. The inclusion of such pieces allows for a range of color and style options within the seasonal lineup.

Lab-grown diamond solitaires represent another segment of the guide, with items like a round diamond solitaire accompanied by a pavé band. These solitaires provide alternatives derived from laboratory processes, ensuring they meet standards for ethical production. The Forever Yes Engagement Collection encompasses rings suitable for proposals, while the Pick it Today, Propose Tonight initiative offers pieces available for prompt selection. This approach facilitates decisions for significant events without extended lead times.

Custom design services enable customers to engage with in-house designers and makers to develop individualized jewelry. The process involves incorporating personal elements, such as heirloom stones or specific motifs, into newly fabricated items. With a foundation built over 30 years, the store applies its accumulated knowledge in crafting these custom works. This service extends to various forms of jewelry, allowing for adaptations that align with individual narratives and preferences.

Repair and maintenance options support the overall offerings, addressing needs for restoration and upkeep. In-house capabilities handle tasks including ring resizing, necklace mending, stone replacement, and general cleaning. Such services apply to items with sentimental value, where attention to detail preserves the integrity of the original piece. Examples from customer accounts include the restoration of long-held rings and the repair of damaged chains, demonstrating the practical application of these skills.

Gift cards serve as an additional component within the guide, available in set denominations with delivery through email channels. This feature provides an alternative for those seeking versatile gifting solutions. The WJ Insider program extends invitations to participants for early access to collections and related updates, fostering ongoing engagement with the store's activities.

A gift set inspired by the Aurora, featuring one-of-a-kind opals, adds to the seasonal selections. This set introduces unique elements drawn from natural phenomena, incorporating opals known for their distinctive play of color. Such additions expand the thematic scope of the holiday materials, offering pieces that stand out through their inspiration and composition.

Emily Nichols, Co-Owner of Wexford Jewelers, offered observations on the integration of sustainable materials. "The 2025 Holiday Wish Book incorporates lab-grown diamonds alongside traditional gemstones, providing options that reflect contemporary approaches to jewelry sourcing," Nichols said.

Julie Terwilliger, Co-Owner, elaborated on the role of experience in service delivery. "Three decades of operation inform the custom design and repair processes outlined in the guide, ensuring alignment with customer expectations," Terwilliger said.

The Holiday Wish Book and Gift Guide can be reviewed online or within the showroom setting. This dual accessibility supports examination of the featured items during the holiday timeframe. Free shipping applies to qualifying orders, enhancing the distribution of these selections.
