December 09, 2025 -
David E. Stanley, APLC, a Louisiana-based criminal defense firm, has announced an enhanced focus on representing individuals accused of drug-related offenses, reflecting ongoing enforcement trends across the state.

As narcotics arrests continue in Louisiana, the firm is expanding defense resources to provide thorough representation for individuals facing drug charges. This initiative responds to the continuing need for experienced legal defense, as Louisiana law-enforcement agencies routinely make arrests for drug possession, distribution, and trafficking offenses.

In light of this, David E. Stanley, APLC, is expanding its focus to provide professional legal guidance for defendants navigating Louisiana?s strict narcotics laws. A seasoned drug-defense attorney, David E. Stanley emphasizes that proactive defense can influence case outcomes.

With more than four decades of experience, attorney David E. Stanley has represented clients in a wide range of complex criminal proceedings. His extensive legal knowledge and strategic approach provide clients with strong representation, particularly in federal criminal defense and appeals. Since opening the Baton Rouge office in 1983, David E. Stanley, APLC, has defended clients? rights in challenging cases in state and federal courts.

Attorney David E. Stanley?s extensive experience equips him to navigate the complex challenges of criminal defense practice, from filing appeals to presenting cases in higher courts. He has appeared before the Louisiana Supreme Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in various criminal matters. Additionally, he is admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court. His broad experience enables him to effectively manage a wide variety of federal and Louisiana criminal appeals.

David E. Stanley, APLC, has maintained a respected presence in Louisiana?s legal community for more than four decades. Stanley?s experience includes defending clients against complex state and federal charges, representing individuals accused of serious felonies, and upholding constitutional rights in high-stakes litigation. The firm?s decision to strengthen its drug crimes defense practice aligns with Stanley?s ongoing mission to provide thorough and ethical representation for clients navigating the criminal justice system.

The Louisiana law firm reports that many drug-related cases involve allegations stemming from traffic stops or searches that raise constitutional questions. David E. Stanley, APLC, explains that scrutinizing evidence collection, search warrants, and interrogation procedures is often an essential part of developing an effective defense strategy. ?Every case requires a careful review of law enforcement conduct and procedural compliance before formal charges proceed in court,? said David E. Stanley.

The new initiative reaffirms the firm?s commitment to achieving fair treatment under the law. David E. Stanley stated that his expanded drug-defense approach is designed to address both misdemeanor and felony narcotics cases, including those involving prescription medications and controlled substances.

The drug-defense attorney further explained that Individuals may not fully understand the severity of potential outcomes under Louisiana?s sentencing standards until they consult legal counsel. For that reason, the firm encourages anyone charged with possession or distribution to seek qualified representation immediately.

David E. Stanley, APLC, is licensed to practice in all Louisiana state courts and in several federal jurisdictions, including the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court. The firm welcomes inquiries from individuals seeking counsel regarding pending or future legal matters involving narcotics violations and other criminal offenses.

Besides drugs and narcotics, David E. Stanley, APLC, also represents clients facing charges for violent crimes, vehicular homicide, child molestation, child pornography, federal criminal defense, firearms and weapons, prostitution, public corruption, and white-collar crimes. The firm also handles criminal appeals.
