Home and Garden America, which is based in Carson City, Nevada, has recently released a survival seed vault that has been gaining rave reviews on Amazon.com. Chuck Harmon, a spokesperson for the company states, "Since its initial launch, the seed vault has gained a number of five star reviews. We believe that it should be part of every bug out bag, and apparently our customers agree with us."

Harmon states that the seed vault kit is a great addition to any survival gear kit, and that it offers an unlimited supply of food. He explains, "Anyone who wants to truly be prepared for disaster should consider a survival seed vault. You get a number of seed varieties from cabbage and carrots to peas and tomatoes, and with an 85 percent germination rate, so you'll never run out of fresh veggies and fruits no matter what the situation."

The seed vault kit includes herbs such as parsley and thyme as well as vegetables and fruits like watermelon, and even eggplant. The company says that when packing survival gear, their survival seed vault kit is an absolute must.

The kit comes in a sturdy 30 caliber ammo box to seal out moisture and ensure that seeds are kept dry and safe until use. The company says that the reasoning behind the kit is that all of the seeds included will in turn, produce more seeds, providing the survivor with fresh foods for a long period of time. The open pollinated heritage seeds are set to produce acres of food in total, and the kit comes with a free downloadable guide for planting and storing to maximize the kit's overall value.

Harmon states that the kit simply makes sense for those looking for the ultimate in survival gear. "You want to take every possible chance to secure your future, and we believe that this seed vault kit gives you a great opportunity to do that," he states.

The kit is currently available on Amazon, and has several positive reviews. Those interested can read the reviews on the Amazon marketplace or visit the company on their official website.
