LEXINGTON, KY - December 11, 2025 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Summit Scapes Construction, a locally owned hardscape and landscape company serving Central New York, underscores its focus on sustainable practices through its hardscaping installation in Manlius, NY. This emphasis comes as industry trends for 2025 highlight the increasing adoption of permeable pavers to address stormwater management challenges in regions like New York. With over 13 years of experience, the company integrates durable materials that support environmental goals while enhancing outdoor spaces.

Hardscaping involves the installation of non-living elements such as stone patios, walkways, and retaining walls. Summit Scapes Construction specializes in these features, using materials that provide long-term stability and aesthetic appeal. The company's Unilock-certified technicians ensure that installations meet standards for quality and performance. Unilock products include permeable pavers, which allow water to infiltrate the ground, reducing runoff and supporting local ecosystems. This approach aligns with broader shifts in landscape design, where sustainability plays a central role in project planning.

In 2025, landscape professionals anticipate a rise in eco-friendly elements, including permeable surfaces that mitigate flooding and promote water conservation. Permeable pavers, designed with joints that facilitate water flow, have become particularly relevant in urban and suburban areas facing heavy rainfall or regulatory requirements for green infrastructure. Summit Scapes Construction incorporates these materials in its projects, offering options that comply with such needs without compromising on design flexibility.

The company's hardscaping services extend to creating functional outdoor living areas, including fire pits and seawalls that protect against erosion. These elements are tailored to the specific topography and climate of Central New York, where annual snowfall exceeds 100 inches in parts of Onondaga County. By focusing on durable stonework, Summit Scapes Construction addresses seasonal challenges, ensuring that installations withstand freeze-thaw cycles common in the region.

?Permeable hardscapes are a smart option in the right situations,? said Jared VanDerVeer, Owner of Summit Scapes Construction. ?When a property has drainage issues or specific requirements, we can use permeable systems that manage water more effectively without sacrificing how the space looks or functions.?.

Beyond permeability, 2025 trends point to naturalistic designs that blend hardscape with softer landscape features. Summit Scapes Construction complements its stonework with landscaping services, such as tree and shrub care, to create cohesive outdoor environments. This integration supports the growing interest in multifunctional spaces that serve relaxation, entertainment, and ecological purposes. Projects often begin with site preparation, including grading and drainage, to establish a solid foundation for hardscape elements.

The emphasis on sustainability also ties into wellness-oriented designs, where outdoor spaces promote health and connection to nature. In Manlius, NY, where residential and commercial properties seek to maximize usable land, hardscaping provides structured areas that enhance property value through improved functionality. Summit Scapes Construction's approach involves close collaboration with clients to understand their objectives, resulting in customized designs that balance form and utility.

Additional trends for 2025 include the use of earthy tones and organic shapes in hardscape materials. The company selects pavers and stones that harmonize with natural surroundings, drawing from a palette that reflects regional landscapes. This attention to detail extends to maintenance services, ensuring that hardscapes remain in condition over time.

?At the end of the day, our goal is to build hardscapes that last and don?t create headaches down the road,? added VanDerVeer. ?That might mean better drainage, stronger bases, or using products with a lighter footprint, but it always starts with what?s best for the property and the client.?.

In addition to hardscaping, Summit Scapes Construction provides comprehensive sitework, including excavation and soil management, to support project execution. These services ensure proper integration of hardscapes with existing terrain, preventing issues like poor drainage that could undermine structural integrity.

The company's portfolio includes examples of transformed spaces, such as patios that serve as extensions of indoor living areas. These installations demonstrate how hardscaping can create defined zones for activities while incorporating elements like permeable surfaces to handle water efficiently.

As part of its broader offerings, Summit Scapes Construction addresses seasonal needs through snow plowing, which complements its hardscaping focus by maintaining accessibility during winter months. This holistic service model reflects an understanding of Central New York's variable weather patterns.

Looking ahead, the alignment with 2025 trends positions Summit Scapes Construction to continue supporting community needs for resilient outdoor designs. The company's commitment to quality craftsmanship remains central to its operations.
