December 23, 2025

Englewood, Colorado - December 23, 2025 -
Flesch Law Denver Injury Accident Lawyers has expanded its focus on slip and fall cases as these incidents continue to represent a significant portion of personal injury claims throughout the Denver metropolitan area. The firm's enhanced approach to premises liability cases comes as data shows slip and fall accidents remain among the leading causes of emergency room visits and workplace injuries across Colorado.

The Englewood-based personal injury firm has developed comprehensive legal strategies specifically tailored to slip and fall cases, recognizing the unique challenges these claims present. Property owners and businesses throughout Denver face increasing scrutiny regarding premises safety, while victims often struggle to navigate complex liability issues and insurance negotiations following these accidents.

"Slip and fall cases require thorough investigation and documentation to establish liability," said Kevin C. Flesch, founding attorney at Flesch Law Denver Injury Accident Lawyers. "Many victims don't realize that property owners have a legal obligation to maintain safe premises, and when they fail to do so, they can be held accountable for resulting injuries. We've seen cases where a simple wet floor or uneven sidewalk has led to life-altering injuries requiring extensive medical treatment and rehabilitation."

The firm's approach to slip and fall cases includes immediate site investigation, witness interviews, surveillance footage preservation, and collaboration with safety experts to establish negligence. These cases often involve injuries ranging from fractures and head trauma to spinal cord damage, each requiring different legal strategies to secure appropriate compensation.

Recent statistics from the National Floor Safety Institute indicate that falls account for over 8 million hospital emergency room visits annually, representing 21.3 percent of all visits. In Colorado, winter weather conditions and variable terrain contribute to elevated slip and fall risks, particularly for elderly residents and outdoor workers.

"The financial impact of a slip and fall accident extends far beyond initial medical bills," added Flesch. "Victims often face lost wages, ongoing therapy costs, and diminished quality of life. Our role is to ensure that insurance companies and property owners fully compensate victims for both immediate and long-term damages."

The firm's premises liability practice covers incidents occurring in various settings, including retail stores, restaurants, office buildings, apartment complexes, and public spaces. Each environment presents distinct legal considerations, from commercial property maintenance standards to residential landlord responsibilities.

Flesch Law Denver Injury Accident Lawyers operates on a contingency fee basis, meaning clients pay no upfront costs and only pay attorney fees if compensation is secured. The firm maintains 24-hour availability to respond to accident victims and begin case investigations promptly.

Established as a dedicated personal injury practice, Flesch Law serves the greater Denver area with representation in car accidents, motorcycle accidents, medical malpractice, wrongful death, and premises liability cases. The firm has secured multiple six-figure settlements and multimillion-dollar verdicts for accident victims throughout Colorado.
