Longmont Braces Expands Orthodontic Services with Addition of New Orthodontist

December 23, 2025

LONGMONT, CO - December 23, 2025 -
Longmont Braces, a leading orthodontic practice in Longmont, Colorado, has expanded its comprehensive orthodontic services with the recent addition of a new orthodontist to its clinical team. The expansion strengthens the practice's ability to serve the growing demand for specialized orthodontic care in the Longmont community.

The practice, which has established itself as a premier destination for orthodontic treatment in the region, continues to build on its reputation for providing individualized care plans for patients of all ages. The expansion of the clinical team enables the practice to accommodate more patients while maintaining the personalized attention that has become its hallmark.

Dr. Stephanie Ross, who leads the practice alongside Dr. Aden Peterson, emphasized the significance of this strategic growth for the community. "The addition of another skilled orthodontist to our team represents our commitment to meeting the evolving needs of Longmont families," said Dr. Ross. "This expansion allows us to reduce wait times for consultations and provide even more flexible scheduling options for our patients, particularly those balancing school, work, and family commitments."

The expanded team will continue to offer the practice's full range of orthodontic services, including traditional metal and clear braces, Invisalign clear aligner therapy, dentofacial orthopedics, surgical orthodontics, two-phase treatment plans, and temporary anchorage devices. The practice has also maintained its commitment to providing emergency orthodontic care for existing patients experiencing urgent issues.

With the growing demand for orthodontic services in Colorado, particularly for Invisalign and other aesthetic treatment options, the expansion positions the practice to better serve both pediatric and adult patients seeking orthodontic care. The practice has observed an increasing number of adult patients pursuing orthodontic treatment, a trend that has accelerated in recent years as treatment options have become more diverse and discreet.

"Our expanded capacity means we can now offer more comprehensive treatment planning sessions and dedicate additional time to educating patients about their options," added Dr. Ross. "Whether a patient needs traditional braces, is interested in Invisalign, or requires more complex surgical orthodontics, our enhanced team ensures we can provide timely, expert care."

The practice's growth comes at a time when orthodontic technology and treatment methodologies continue to advance rapidly. The expanded team allows the practice to stay current with the latest orthodontic innovations while maintaining the high standard of care patients have come to expect.

Longmont Braces has served the Longmont community for years, specializing in creating customized treatment plans that address each patient's unique orthodontic needs. The practice offers various treatment modalities designed to achieve optimal results while considering patients' lifestyle preferences and aesthetic concerns. From early interceptive treatment for children to comprehensive orthodontic solutions for adults, the practice provides care throughout all stages of life. The team remains dedicated to combining advanced orthodontic techniques with compassionate, patient-centered care to help individuals achieve healthy, confident smiles.
